Joint Inquiry On All Phases Of TVA Voted In the Senate

$50,000 to Be Provided for Broad Study by Committee of 10.

House's Approval Expected Speedily

By Robert C. Albright.

The Senate yesterday approved without a record vote a joint Congressional investigation into the Tennesse Valley Authority, "internal dissension" among its members and all charges preferred by its foes and its friends.

Adoption of a joint resolution, requiring Presidential approval, was voted by the Senate following last-minute inclusion of 8 of the 23 charges brought by TVA critics, rewritten and modified.

Invesigation would be by a joint committee of five Senators to be named by the Vice President, and five Representatives to be picked by the Speaker.

To cover expenses of the inquiry, $50,000 was approved by the Senate, the cost to be paid in equal shares from House and Senate contingent funds.

Sent to House.

The resolution was messaged immediately to the House, where it will be laid before the Rules Committee for immediate action Monday. Approval by the House may come Tuesday or Wednesday.

A few hours before the Senate opened discussion, Senate Majority Leader Alben W. Barkley reached a compromise on the scope of the inquiry with Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), of New Hampshire, and Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, who sponsored counter-resolutions.

The investigation was broadened to cover in its sweep virtually every phase of New Deal power policy, ranging from charges by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan of efforts to defraud the Government in purchase of lands, to litigation by private utilities opposing the program.

In addition, Barkley accepted on the floor an amendment by Senate Minority Leader Charles L. McNary requiring the Congressional committee to look into comparative costs of TVA operations with other Federal power projects, and allotment of costs among TVA beneficiaries.

Green and Lewis Held Near Accord On Wage-Hr. Law

By the Associated Press.

Members of a Houre Labor subcommittee yesterday said they believed the C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor were nearing agreement on the question of wage-hour legislation.

Committeemen made this statement privately after hearing John L. Lewis, C. I. Od chief, and William Green, federation president, outline their positions at informal conferences on the subject.

Green, who met with the subcommittee today, said his organization was disposed to approve a minimum wage of 30 cents an hour if it proved necessary to go that low to get the legislation enacted.

Lewis told the broup yesterday he favored the proposed graduated minimum wage but suggested the initial figure should not be lower than 35 cents an hour.

Battleship's Victory Elates Scott Farm

Randolph Scott, film hero, spent a busy day on the movie lot yesterday spreading the news of the victory of Battleship, the horse owned by his wife, Mrs. Marion Scott, in the Grand National at Aintree. Shown (left to right) are Scott, Producer Lucien Hubbard and Joan Bennett.

Everybody Happy at Montpelier as Result of Son of Man o' War's Triumph in the Rich Grand National Steeplechase.

By Walter Haight.

If Man o' War's chest is so swollen that he has to be pried out of his Kentucky stall, if he makes a sudden lunge and jumps the fence while taking his morning exercise, if he tosses his head high and sends his rear hoofs flying, if he acts like a 2-year-old instead of a 21-year-old—well, I hope you will pardon the old fellow. He probably has heard that Battleship, a chip off the old block, yesterday added the grueling Grand National to the long list of turf classics won by his offspring.

The triumph is even greater than that. For Man o' War's son is the only American born and sired horse that ever won the Grand National.

District, Maryland, and Virginia racing circles joined the Nation in acclaiming the great victory of Battleship. For several years, Battleship was trained by Selby Burch, of this city, and was schooled for racing at our own Benning track.

2d Bill Passed For Expanding District Airport

Senate Votes for Closing of Military Road to Better Hoover Field.

By James D. Secrest.

The Senate yesterday for the second time passed a bill providing for the closing of Military road to permit the expansion of Washington-Hoover Airport.

Similar but not identical to a measure passed by Congress last year and vetoed by President Roosevelt, the bill authorizes the Secretary of War to lease to the National Airport Corporation at $1 a year that portion of the roadway flanking the flying field.

It also requires the airport to pay Arlington County $25,000 for the construction of a substitute road.

Test Farm Protected.

Unlike its predecessor, the bill does not cede any part of the Agriculture Department's experimental farm to the airport, nor does it provide for the filling in of the lagoon.

Roads Cleared For Visitors to Cherry Trees

200,000 Tourists Expected to See Blossoms This Week-End.

Expecting the cherry blossoms to attract 200,000 tourists to the Capital over the Baltimore-Washington highway this week-end, Maryland officials yesterday announced that all parking on the thoroughfare would be banned from 6 a. m. to 8 p. m. tomorrow from Laurel to the District line.

Fifty-five State, county and town policemen will direct traffic along the 20-mile four-lane highway. If the mass movement is sufficiently heavy, cars will be diverted at Hyattsville to the Bladensburg road, officials said.

Meanwhile, as the blossoms successfully weathered yesterday's wind and falling temperature, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, appealed to local residents to view the floral display in the morning to diminish the afternoon throngs.

Despite anticipated showers today, the blossoms are expected to be at their height over the week-end. A $10,000 fireworks display will be

Senate Junks Tax Blow at State Income

House Reduction in Gift, Estate Exemptions Deleted in Bill.

Committee Also Aims to Aid in Dissolution of Personal Holdings.

The Senate Finance Committee yesterday discarded another salient feature of the House tax bill—estate and gift tax changes bolstering Federal revenue, but reducing tax credits allowed to States.

Nor was the Senate committee through wielding the pruning knife. Another session was called for today, when proposals will be made to shake loose credit tied up in tax-besieged personal holding companies that want to dissolve, but can't.

Eliminated from the bill yesterday were House provisions lowering exemptions from estate and gift taxes and reducing existing Federal credits to the States for local payments on gift and estate levies. The House bill cut State credits from approximately 25 per cent under present law to 16.5 per cent.

Lehman's Protest Heeded.

The committee voted a return to existing gift and estate taxation following protests by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman of New York that the Federal Treasury was encroaching on State tax fields and "starving" local governments, particularly in the field of death duties and gifts.

Today the committee will seek means of encouraging dissolution of personal holding companies, in an effort to loosen another mountain of frozen credit reputedly blockaded by steep taxation.

Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), of Georgia, a comember of the committee, said the group will try to "find some mechanism" to permit dissolution of holding companies that wish to dissolve, but are prevented from doing so by high tax rates.

The committee's elimination yesterday of House gift and estate tax provisions was the third direct blow aimed at the Administration-sponsored House tax bill in two days.

On Thursday, the committee voted for complete elimination of the undivided profits tax principle and drastic modification of the capital gains tax proposals, substituting flat-rate taxes on both.

The present Federal gift and estate tax allows exemptions of $40,000 each on gifts and estates or a total of $80,000 on both. The House had combined the two into a flat $40,000 exemption for both gifts and estates. In addition, it had reduced the separate annual exemption for gift taxes from $5,000 to $3,000, to bring increased revenue into the Treasury.

Present Law Restored.

The Senate committee yesterday wiped out at one stroke all of these changes, with the proposed sharp cut in gift and estate tax credit allowed States for local death duty and gift tax payments. This restored, in effect, the provisions of the present law. At the meeting

Fishing Is Halted.

By Franklyn Waltman.

One point of serious friction between the United States and Japan was amicably settled last night when the State Department announced receipt of satisfactory assurances from the Tokyo government that it would take steps to prevent Nipponese from engaging in salmon fishing in the waters off Alaska.

The agreement was reached after months of delicate and arduous negotiations during which feeling against the Japanese mounted on the Pacific Coast. The activities of Japanese fishermen were alleged to be depleting the salmon supply of Alaska—vital to the economic and governmental life of that American territory—and seriously affecting the States of Washington, Oregon and California and British Columbia.

All Vessels Licensed.

The controversy between the two governments concerned offshore waters of Alaska, especially in the Bristol Bay area.

Without prejudice to its rights under international law, the Japanese government gave this government, as announced here, assurances as follows:

"That the Japanese government is suspending the three-year salmon fishing survey which has been in progress since 1936 in the waters in question.

"That inasmuch as salmon fishing by Japanese vessels is not permitted without licenses from the Japanese government and as the government has been refraining from issuing such licenses to those vessels which desired to proceed to the Bristol Bay area to fish for salmon, it will, on its own initiative, continue to suspend the issuance of such licenses.

"That in order to make effective this assurance the Japanese government is prepared to take, if and when conclusive evidence is presented that any Japanese vessels engage in salmon fishing on a commercial scale in the waters in question, necessary and proper measures to prevent any such further operations."

Suspension of the Japanese salmon fishing survey will have the result of taking Nipponese survey

House Conferees Concede Trial of Parking Meters

Conferees on the District supply bill yesterday agreed to authorize a trial of parking meters after modification of a Senate amendment, and prepared to call up the bill for another House vote early next week.

Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, explained that three changes were made in the amendment, which the House rejected this week.

One states specifically that installation of the meters is to be "experimental." Another limits the trial to the end of the next fiscal year, and the third provides that the meters shall be set up in not more than four blocks or 16 street sections for the trial period.

Thomas expressed belief the House will accept the compromise. Members of the House Roads Committee, however, are planning to continue their fight against it.

U. S. Writer Ousted.

By the United Press.

Vienna, March 25.—Nazi rulers of Austria tonight warned all foreign newspaper correspondents that they would be expelled from the country if their dispatches displeased German authorities.

As proof that they meant business, George Gedye, veteran correspondent of the New York Times and the London Telegraph and Morning Post, was ordered to leave Austria before Monday night.

The government press department summoned foreign correspondents and admonished them regarding "atrocity" stories.

Gedye is a former British army officer, a resident of Vienna for 13 years. He has written books on German occupation of the Rhineland and on the Hapsburg family. A previous expulsion order by the German secret police in Berlin, made soon after the Anschluss, was withdrawn a week ago.

1,600 Seized in Vienna.

In a dispatch to the Times last Sunday, Gedye said the first expulsion order apparently was based on his reporting of an incident in which several foreign correspondents and Austrian officers were detained in the chancellery by a German officer with drawn pistol.

It was announced officially that 1,600 persons had been arrested in Vienna since the Anschluss, of whom 300 already had been released. A Nazi official said that the rate persons were leaving custody now exceeded the rate of those arrested.

"A number of arrests were due to over-zealous party members who had personal grudges against certain persons," he said.

U. S. to Shelter All.

By the Associated Press.

Warm Springs, Ga., March 25.—President Roosevelt enlarged the scope of America's political refugee relief proposal today by asserting it provided an asylum here not only for Jews of Germany and Austria, but for other oppressed minorities there and in all other lands.

While primarily intended to assist Jews in Germany and seized Austria, within present immigration quotas he told a press conference that under a policy adopted at the time the American Constitution was being drawn the helping hand was extended to all races and creeds.

He replied affirmatively when asked whether it applied to political and religious groups like the Catholics under the Barcelona government in Spain, Trotzkyites in Russia, and anti-Fascists in Italy.

Drives With Bullitt.

He expressed the belief requests for aid had come from Protestants and Catholics, as well as Jews in central Europe.

The President talked to reporters while sitting behind the wheel of his new, five-passenger car.

Hatless, he drove up with William C. Bullitt, American Ambassador to France, and Basil O'Conner, former law partner of the President, and stopped in a dirt road in front of one of two press cottages. A hot sun beat down as he replied to questions touching foreign and domestic problems.

Quotas Are Merged.

He discussed Secretary Hull's proposal inviting 9 European powers and the 20 other American republics to join the United States in setting up a committee to find private financial help in transferring oppressed peoples to this and the other countries.

He said no new legislation would be required in the United States. In connection with Germany and Austria, he pointed out that, under the present law, the immigration quotas were merged when two countries become one political entity.

Under the Hull proposal, Germany could send about 26,000 immigrants.

Assails Incompetents.

The President said he was trying to work out with Ambassador Bullitt a plan for ridding the Government career services of incompetent personnel.

He said it was difficult to weed out the unfit in the civil service because he could not hire and fire, and had to let the incompetents stay on as long as they desired.

Only two branches of Government he added, are run on an efficient personnel basis. In the Army and Navy, he explained, only a certain

House Gets Bill For Resources PlanningBoard

By the United Press.

The House Rivers and Harbors Committee, rejecting President Roosevelt's original demands, yesterday introduced a regional planning bill creating a national resource board limited to an advisory capacity in dealing with States and localities.

The bill, which would set up seven conservation planning regions, contains no provisions for establishment of power authorities patterned after the Tennessee Valley Authority as recommended by Mr. Roosevelt.

The President, however, in a message to the special session of Congress last November, withdrew his first request for establishment of seven "little TVA" regions and asked that the bill be "strictly planning."

Would Set Up 4-Man Board.

Approved by the committee shortly before it was introduced by Chairman Joseph J. Mansfield (Democrat), Texas, the bill would make permanent the temporary administration for power from Bonneville Dam on the Columbia River and extend it to Grand Coulee and other projects in the basin.

It would create a basic four-man board, with a $10,000-a-year chairman appointed by the President, and a single unsalaried representative of the Agriculture, Interior and War Departments.

Directors would be created for each of the seven regions at an annual salary of $7,500. The director for one particular region would sit in as a fifth member of the board when matters affecting his territory were under discussion.

Limited to Studies.

Limited strictly to studies in cooperation with States and localities, the board would report its recommendations to the President, who, after consulting with departments involved, might suggest construction to preserve and utilize national resources to Congress.

Each regional director would have no regular committee but would work with existing State and local planning and conservation agencies in formulating the program for his area.

The bill contains a provision, recommended by Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, ousted TVA head, empowering the States to enter into compacts among themselves on a watershed basis to construct flood-control and other projects.

State Rights Protected.

It specifically provides that all existing powers and water rights of the States and present functions of State and Federal agencies in no way be limited by activities of the board, thus assuring that it can do no more than investigate, co-ordinate and recommend.

The bill also calls for the naming of a director for the Columbia Basin other than the Bonneville power administrator, although it was planned originally to combine the jobs.

The seven conservation regions, following the boundaries recommended by Mr. Roosevelt last summer, are:

Northeastern, for drainage basins of rivers flowing into the St. Lawrence watershed east of the New York-Pennsylvania line on Lake Erie and into the Atlantic north and east of the Potomac.

For Potomac Basin.

Southeastern, for the Potomac Basin and rivers flowing into the Atlantic south of the Potomac, into the Gulf east of the Mississippi and into the Mississippi below the Ohio River.

West south-central, for the Arkansas and rivers flowing into the Mississippi from the west below its mouth and into the Gulf west of the Mississippi, including the Rio Grande.

Northwestern, for the Columbia Basin and rivers flowing into the Pacific.

Ex-Defense Chief Asserts Lithuania Will Fight Later

By the Associated Press.

Kovno, Lithuania, March 25.—Former Defense Minister Gen. Stasys Dirmantas declared in a bristling statement to the diet today that Lihuania was ready to fight Poland when the time arrives, but "for the present let the diplomats speak."

Dirmantas, who headed the defense ministry in the cabinet which resigned last night, said Lithuania accepted the Polish ultimatum to settle their long-standing differences after analyzing the present situation in Europe and the condition of the nation's armaments.

A Lithuanian delegation went to Augustow, Poland, today for negotiations on resumption of communications between the two countries.

Renewal of communications and establishment of diplomatic relations were demanded in a warlike Polish ultimatum to which Lithuania capitulated March 19.

Politics and People

Congress Needs to Put Watchdog on Treasury With More Teeth—Not Fewer, as Proposed.

By Franklyn Waltman

IT IS to be expected that an Administration which estimates its probable revenues by the cute practice of "kicking mailbags around," as Secreary Henry Morgenthau has explained, in extenuation of the failure of income tax collections to meet expectations, would be irritated by activities of the Comptroller-General.

WALTMAN

What is so surprising is that Congress, knowmg that the power of Parliament is the power of the purse-string, should so blithely renounce is control over expenditures of the Federal Government as it does in the pending reorganization bill. Yet in view of the short-comings of the General Accounting Office in recent years and ingenious arguments of Senator James F. Byrnes in charge of the bill, it is not so surprising.

Any layman who has given any study to this intricate accounting and auditing problem will concede that the present set-up is not satisfactory. But the transfer of powers and functions of the General Accounting Office to the director of the budget is not the solution—even though the Byrnes scheme for establishing a joint committee on public accounts of Congress is a step in the right direction. But what is the good of that if Congress is going to sterilize its watch-dog? What the watch dog needs is more teeth—not fewer—and all the legislative vitality that can be given him.

The strength of the argument of the Brownlow Committee is its contention that the Comptroller-General as a "watch dog" of the Treasury has no teeth. In large measure that can be proven. But the Comptroller-General has had a threatening bark which has annoyed, if it has not frightened, marauders. This need not be proved—it is demonstrated by the angry resentment which this and other Administrations have shown for the Comptroller-General.

The weakness of the proposal of the Brownlow Committee is that instead of undertaking to give the "watch dog" teeth, it proposes to shoot him and establish in his place a nice sleek greyhound—called a General-Auditor—who would post-audit Government expenditures and revenues. If he finds anything wrong he tells Congress about it. Congress may do something or nothing—depending on the aggressiveness of the members of the Joint Committee on Public Accounts.

If experience, however, is any indication of how Congress will perform, that body will do nothing unless some outrageously flagrant abuse of an appropriation should arise. For 15 years Congress has done little or nothing to back up the Comptroller-General, its watch dog, and J. R. McCarl was a good watch dog. Indeed, it had so little interest in his work that it did not bother to ask him for the reports required by law. Indeed, Congress did not know such reports were not submitted until the inquiry on the reorganization bill was launched last year. And when the present Comptroller-General submitted a report last January Senate Democratic Leader Barkley remained in ignorance of it for more than two months when he found out about it as an incident to the TVA controversy.

All of which makes slightly ridiculous the lofty, language of the Brownlow committee about establishing "the full accountability of the Executive to Congress." Does anyone believe that Congress will impeach the President for spending money contrary to an appropriation act? Of course not. The difficulty of getting a TVA investigation well illustrates the reluctance of Congress even to lift the lid to see what an Administration of its own party is doing.

What then is the solution of the problem created by the need of Congress to see that money is spent for the purpose for which it is appropriated? Well, it is not to transfer all but post-audit functions to the Director of the Budget, who would not be appointed for a 15-year term, as Senator Byrnes said in the Senate last Wednesday but would hold office at the pleasure of the President. Nor, as Senator Byrnes also said, could the proposed Auditor-General act "so that payment may be stopped" of monies which he believed were being illegally expended. The very essence of the pending bill is to prevent the Auditor-General from interferring in any way with the Executive officers of the Government.

The only sound solution would be just the reverse—give the Auditor-General power to interfere. All this talk about giving the Federal Government an accounting and auditing system as efficient as that possessed by the General Electric or General Motors Corporations is all bosh. There is no analogy between the accounting set-up of private business corporations and the Federal Government. The former are institutions of men. The latter is an institution of laws. Not a cent can be properly spent by the Treasury except according to law. A private business does not need a law to spend money. Where, then, is the analogy?

And, efficiency should not be the paramount objective of Congressional action. As Justice Louis D. Brandeis so well put it, "the doctrine of the separation of powers" on which this Government rests, was adopted "not to promote efficiency, but to preclude the exercise of arbitrary power." And, as Justice Brandeis added: "The purpose was not to avoid friction, but by means of the inevitable friction incident to the distribution of governmental powers among three departments, to save the people from autocracy."

In other words, in a democracy it is a healthy thing to have a Comptroller-General, or an Auditor-General, who frequently steps on the toes and gets in the hair of the executive officers. It is a dangerous thing to let executive officers be a law unto themselves—with only the thin reed on which to lean that sometime, somewhere—after the Act is done—Congress might hold them to accountability.

* * * *

The accounting and auditing part of the reorganization bill is not all bad. It has some splendid provisions. But it does not go far enough toward preserving a Congressional check over expenditures. By amendment it could be greatly improved. For instance, just to be constructive, we offer an amendment. It is designed to give the Auditor-General a chance to take a look at contracts and see whether they are in accordance with law as soon as they are executed and before the money is spent. Under the bill, as it stands, he gets that look after the money is spent.

This easily could be done by inserting into the present bill Section 3743 of the Revised Statues, amended to provide that "all contracts to be made, by virtue of law, requiring the advance of money or in any manner connected with the settlement of public accounts, shall be deposited at once in the General Auditing Office without any delay whatsoever, in accordance with regulations to be promulgated by the Auditor-General as he may deem necessary to require proper compliance with this law; provided that the Auditor-General, upon receipt of any and all contracts filed in accordance with this section shall, promptly and without delay, notify the Director of the Budget and the department, independent office or establishment of the Government concerned, of any reason or reasons why such contract or contracts are not a proper charge against appropriated funds."

The purpose of that is to close the door before the horse walks out—not after.

A bill establishing a new agency to regulate civil aviation drew opposition from railroads, telegraph companies and the Air Lines Pilots Association.

Representatives of the Association of American Railroads and the Western Union Telegraph Co. told the House Interstate Commerce Committee they were opposed to a section requiring them to bear the cost of erecting safety lights or markers on their poles, bridges or other structures.

David L. Bencke, representing the Pilots Association, said he favored regulations of civil aviation through an existing agency such as the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Britain Rearms For Reich, Held Premier's View

Private Information From Chamberlain to Labor Opposition Reported.

By the Associated Press.

London, March 25.—The National Council of Labor, central body of the British labor movement, today issued a sharp condemnation of Prime Minister Chamberlain's "cynical disregard of the need for defending democracy."

The council's political wing rallied powerful trade union representatives—whose co-operation is essential to the success of Chamberlain's rearmament speed-up plan—to support the attack.

Despite it, some quarters believed labor would co-operate. Reliable sources said Chamberlain had greatly impressed trade union leaders with private information that Britain was rearming solely against Germany.

Trade union leaders refused to confirm the report, however, and belief was widespread the attack indicated labor's united opposition.

The manifesto came from an emergency meeting called to consider the Prime Minister's declaration of foreign policy yesterday.

The labor leaders demanded an immediate meeting of the Assembly of the League of Nations to consider "the appeasement of Europe" and declared "the government's continuance in office is a grave menace to the peace of Europe."

The manifesto assailed what it called Chamberlain's failure to disclose a "constructive policy" against war and demanded abandonment of the "farcical" policy of nonintervention in the Spanish war.

$11,000,000,000 Arms Plan.

Observers believed this might lead to a labor demand for political and industrial guarantees for support of the rearmament speed up. Some foresaw labor's refusal to co-operate without further concessions toward a stronger foreign policy.

The extent of the proposed arms increase has not been divulged. In Commons' lobbies, however, rumors say it would reach 50 per cent—raising the vast $7,500,000,000 five-year plan to $11,250,000,000.

Chamberlain was described as still shocked by Reichsfuehrer Hitler's coup in Austria and as confident that he had gone further than any of his predecessors in committing Britain to fight in any future European war.

Winston Churchill flew to Paris, where he was expected to confer with French government officials. Churchill, a conservative and member of Britain's World War cabinets, is understood to be seeking France's views of what her reaction would be to an insurgent victory in Spain.

Catholics to Vote "Yes."

Vienna, March 25 (AP).—All Catholic parishes in Austria will receive communications advising that Catholics vote "yes" in the plebiscite April 10 on Germany's annexation of Austria, Dr. Jacob Weinbach, secretary to Theodore Cardinal Innitzer, announced today.

Cardinal Innitzer is Archbishop of Vienna, ranking Catholic prelate in Austria.

Dr. Weinbach said the status of the Austrian concordat with the Vatican still was uncertain.

"We believe the concordat still is in force because there has been no announcement to the contrary," he said. "We do not know whether it will be replaced by the German concordat."

Asked whether Austrian priests still were in prison, Dr. Weinbach said, "Yes, and we have been unable to free a single one up to now."

Coups Held Impossible.

Paris, March 25 (AP).—Informed persons said tonight Czechoslovakia had informed France that the Prague government had taken adequate precautions to render "impossible" a successful internal coup by the German minority.

Stefan Osusky, Czech minister to Paris, was said to have told Joseph Paul-Boncour, France's foreign minister, that Czechoslovakia would appeal to France for aid only if foreign troops crossed her frontiers.

Duce Aids Port Periled by Nazi Shift of Trade

Trieste Fears Austrian Business Will Be Rerouted to Hamburg.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, March 25.—Premier Mussolini promised tonight to safeguard the interests of Trieste, former Austrian seaport which has been alarmed by economic difficulties growing out of the union of Austria and Germany.

Speaking to a delegation of Fascist party leaders from Trieste, Il Duce said he would pay the city his first visit since the advent of fascism.

Austro-German union has raised alarm both in Trieste and Fiume, another former Austrian port.

The two ports saw a danger that Austrian trade would be rerouted through the German cities of Hamburg and Bremen as a result of Austria's new enjoyment of German freight rates and relief from customs duties.

German plans to invest in improvement of Danube River navigation were considered a menace to trade in the Fiume-Trieste region. Such improvement would provide an excellent ship route from Vienna and Bundapest to Rumania, Bulgaria, Turkey, and Greece by way of the Black Sea and the Dardanelles.

Some Trieste interests proposed that the city be made a free port, but this met with opposition from Venice, which felt its own interests would be threatened by establishment of a free port (without customs duties) close at hand.

Fascist circles disclosed, meanwhile, that a plan for distribution throughout Italy of some of the Germanic people in former Austrian regions along Italy's northern border was being studied.

Japanese Offer For Seized Oil in Mexico Reported

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, March 25.—Authoritative sources said today that Japan is preparing to offer Mexico through private companies a huge oil contract for purchase of nearly 500,000,000 gallons of crude oil annually.

Official quarters did not comment on the proposal, which would provide for Japanese technical assistance in construction of pipelines and improvement of some of Mexico's Pacific Coast harbors.

Tax Bill Presented.

Mexico City, March 25 (AP).—The Mexican government tonight presented bills for $2,000,000 back taxes to two of the 17 foreign petroleum companies expropriated by President Lazaro Cardenas.

The amount was alleged due from Aguila (Royal Dutch Shell) and Huasteca, Standard of New Jersey subsidiary, the two largest of the concerns taken over by the government.

Aguila was charged with failing to pay $1,400,000 "absentee' tax on funds sent out of the country in 1934-35. Huasteca was billed for $600,000 alleged due in absentee and income taxes.

Spokesmen for the companies said they did not owe the tax and charged the effort to collect it was a move to reduce indemnification of their properties.

Meanwhile, the peso dropped 10 points against the dollar, being quoted at 4.25 to 4.50.

Maverick Assails Congress' 'Stupor' In Yielding Reins

Maverick, usually an advocate of Administration measures, interrupted House debate on the $447,000,000 War Department appropriation bill to make a general criticism of Congressional "stupor."

President Roosevelt, he said, cannot be accused of attempting to dominate Congress, especially since the special session began last November.

30c-Hr. Wage Law GetsA.F.L. Backing

By the Associated Press.

William Green told a House Labor sub-committee yesterday the American Federation of Labor would support a minimum wage of 30 cents an hour if mandatory annual increases were provided.

Green discussed wage-hour legislation with the sub-committee for more than an hour at an informal meeting arranged by Representative Welch (Republican), California.

He said he told the group that while the Federation regarded 40 cents an hour as a fair minimum wage, it would be willing to support a lower figure in order to obtain passage of labor standard legislation.

Blum Is Unable To Halt Strikes Backing Him

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 25.—Premier Blum tonight failed to halt a wave of strikes which his own supporters inspired to prevent his cabinet's overthrow.

Strikers, estimated to total 26,720, got out of hand and demanded concessions which employers so far have refused. The government sought a method to appease them.

The Socialist premier, however, averted a cabinet crisis by withdrawing a plan to divert 3,145,000,000 francs (currently about $95,900,000) from the exchange equalization fund to a special defense fund.

The Senate yesterday refused to approve this proposal and senators demanded Blum quit in favor of a national union government.

Substitutes New Plan.

Blum declined to press his plan, announcing he would submit a bill to Parliament instead for sweeping reorganization of French economy and finances to strengthen the nation in face of threats of a European war.

He said the new bill would be ready next week.

On the labor front, strikes first were called in Paris and Lille to prevent what labor feared were Rightists' efforts to overthrow Blum on financial measures and substitute a dictatorial "public safety" committee such as France previously has had in gravest days.

Defense Workers Quit.

Vincent Auriol, minister of coordination services of the premier's office, conferred with employers and labor leaders in an effort to halt the strikes.

The movement, intended to be a show of political strength, threatened, however, to be difficult to suppress without concessions from employers.

The strike movement in the Paris region included workers in five Citroen automobile plants, two brake factories and the Gnome and Rhone aviation motors plant.

Six thousand workers in the aviation motors plant occupied the premises this morning after being on strike since yesterday.

Franco Breaks Loyalist Lines, Nears Catalonia

Insurgents 25 Miles From Border as Government Troops Retreat.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, March 25.—Spanish insurgent troops broke through the government's defenses today and advanced to within 25 miles of Catalonia, target of the northeastern campaign.

Gen. Franco's forces swept through the government stronghold of Bujaraloz and pursued fleeing government troops down the Zaragoza-Barcelona highway.

Their next objective was Fraga, 25 miles to the east and a gateway to Catalonia, Spain's northeastern corner. The highway leads from Fraga to Leride, key Catalonian city, and on to Barcelona, present government capital.

A Spanish government statement said Franco's onrushing armies included "40,000 Italians, 60,000 Moors, 10,000 Germans" and Portuguese, Rumanians and Hungarians. It added that the retreat was orderly, and that "our will to resist is entirely unchanged."

Fighting was reported heavy on a jagged front extension more than 12 miles, along which the insurgents' Navarrese, Galician and Moorish troops were attacking government positions at a number of points.

Another second army, further north, occupied the village of Torralba de Aragon, insurgent reports said, and moved slowly down the railroad toward Granen. It reached a point east of Tardienta.

Ill Mother Made Sweeps Winner Buy Her Ticket

Parent in Sanitarium Took $75,000 News 'Calmly,' Clerk Says.

After her first burst of excitement over winning half of a $75,000 prize in the Irish Sweepstakes yesterday, the first concern of Miss Lucille Barry was the condition of her mother, who has been ill in a sanitarium and who shares the ticket with her.

"Mother, too, was excited for a while but on the whole she took it pretty calmly," pretty, 23-year-old Miss Barry said in the afternoon when she returned to her desk in the accounting department of the United States Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Barry was reluctant to purchase the ticket but was persuaded to buy it by her mother, Mrs. Emma Barry. They purchased it jointly in the name of their white Spitz dog named Toby. The Barrys live at 4223 Third street northwest.

Americans Win Most.

Americans won a total of $5,087,346 in the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes on the result of the Grand National Steeplechase at Aintree, England.

Fourteen of the 16 tickets on the winning horse, owned by Mrs. Marion duPont Somerville Scott, of Warrenton, Va., wife of Randolph Scott, the movie actor, were held in the United States. They brought $150,000 each, a total of $2,100,000.

Half of the 32 tickets on Royal Danieli, beaten out in the last hundred yards, and Workman, third, worth $75,000 and $50,000 each, were held in this country. Eight were on each horse.

Approximately $7,522,000 crossed the Atlantic from the United States.

The Treasury Department calculated it would get a juicy slice of the American winnings. Out of a $150,000 prize the Government expects about $65,000 income tax. The levy for a $75,000 prize will be about $20,000 and on a $50,000 prize about $9,700.

Miss Barry and her mother expect to receive about $30,000 each after taxes are paid.

No other Washingtonians held tickets on winners. Holding tickets on Colleen, which came in fourth, were Mrs. Annie Campbell and her brother, Henry Lewis, of 1866 Wyoming avenue northwest. They purchased the ticket in the name of "Two Hopefuls." Frank E. Dopp, Kennedy-Warren Apartments, had a ticket on the same horse. The tickets on horses other than winners are worth $2,302.

She Lost 5 Pounds.

Miss Barry had been so excited since Monday, when she learned that she held a ticket on a possible winner, that she lost 5 pounds during the week.

Too nervous to listen to broadcasts of the race, Miss Barry went to work and stayed at her desk. When notified she was a winner, she was immediately surrounded by other girls in the same office who tried to keep her from getting too excited. As a result they all burst into tears, laughing at the same time.

Fearful that she might faint from the excitement the other girls took her to a restroom where Nurse Margaret Fitzpatrick administered ammonia.

After being besieged by reporters and photographers Miss Barry tried to go back to work. But she and all her friends were too excited. Her winnings were even reported announced by the president of the chamber of commerce at a meeting of the board of directors.

"I'm so glad I didn't sell it," was one of her first statements. Thursday she had gone to New York to investigate an offer to purchase half interest in the ticket for $4,100. A level-headed young woman, she insisted on investigating the prospective purchasers. They became annoyed so she returned home without selling.

Not Even New Clothes.

Miss Barry, friends said, planned to put the money directly in a bank when she receives it and later invest it. She expects to keep her job and doesn't even plan to buy new clothes.

Francis C. Barry, father of the girl, said he hadn't known that his wife and daughter had purchased the ticket until Monday. His wife buys one every year, he said.

Shortage Found In Shut Va. Bank

Richmond, Va., March 25 (AP).—Sherlock Bronson and T. Justin Moore, receivers for the American Bank and Trust Company, reported to Judge Julien Gunn in City Circuit Court that shortages have occurred in which the receivership "has sustained a loss of $27,988.46."

Report of the accounting firm said "the great majority of the irregularities are directly chargeable to T. Kearny Vertner, who was vice president of the American Bank and Trust Company at the time it closed, and who remained with the bank, subsequently to its closing, until his death in May, 1937."

Receivers for the bank announced the bonding companies had agreed to the settlement in full.

This afternoon at 5:00, upper Georgia avenue will be the scene of a short parade heralding the annual initiatory proceedings of local Forty and Eighters, honor and fun society of the American Legion, headed by Grand Chef de Gare John E. McCabe.

Some 30 "Prisonniers de Guerre" will march behind the champion Fort Stevens Post Drum and Bugle Corps south along Georgia avenue from Tuckerman street to Stansbury Hall in preparation for the "wreck" to be held there.

Chef de Chemin de Fer Fred G. Fraser, national head, and Forty and Eight officials of neighboring States have been invited. An informal dance and buffet supper will follow the initiation.

Grand Conducteur W. H. Hargrave is in charge of initiatory arrangements and Sous Grand Correspondent C. T. Milne heads the dance committee.

Haight

Battleship was prominent in both flat and steeplechase racing in Maryland, and Virginia horse country was considered his home grounds.

There was much more whistling than work at Montpelier, Mrs. Marion DuPont Scott's famed country place, yesterday. At the pretentious estate owned by the wife of Randolph Scott, the movie star, and referred to as "The Farm" by neighbors and employes, Hugh B. Craig, who has the very English title of "resident secretary," spent the late morning, the afternoon and night answering congratulatory telephone callers and receiving friends.

"Tell the truth," said Craig," we here at Montpelier were just as surprised as any one by Battleship's victory. Of course, we hoped and we were pulling for him but we thought the course was too strenuous for such a little horse."

It is a fact that Battleship, despite his prowess at the ardent task of steeplechasing, actually is smaller than War Admiral and Seabiscuit. He is short and sout, with a barrel chest that seems almost out of proportion to the rest of his body. But he must have a heart as large as a watermelon to jump hazards his own height, to negotiate the treacherous Bechers Brook and still have the stamina to close courageously. Battleship stands only 15 hands and 2 inches, but he must be all horse. At 12 years, an age when many horses with less strenuous careers behind them have been retired to stud duty, Battleship was running the greatest race of his life.

The real trainer, the brains behind the horse, is Mrs. Scott and much of the credit for bringing the country its first American-bred and American-owned winner of the English classic belongs to the former Mrs. Thomas H. Somerville and "the queen of the hunt meetings." Mrs. Scott, who witnessed yesterday's race, purchased Battleship to develop him into a jumper and had faith in him despite his lack of size. She took a large hand in his schooling and shipped him to England against the advice of friends among the horsemen.

This was the second time her colors, French blue with old rose cross sashes, had been seen in the Grand National. She sent Troublemaker to England several years ago and that horse finished thirteenth. Any mistakes she and her advisers made on that occasion were not made with Battleship. In fact, Battleship was in England when last year's race was run, but Mrs. Scott bided her time until this year.

She had contended that failure of American horses shipped to England were due in a large measure to failure to become acclimated. With this in mind, she sent Battleship over a year and a half ago. He was turned over to Reginald Hobbs, an English trainer, with instructions that he be brought along gradually. Hobbs, whose 17-year-old son rode Battleship to victory, must have followed instructions. During his stay in England, Battleship has had War Vessel, another son of Man o' War, as a stable companion.

Whether Mrs. Scott had in mind the fact that English racing authorities contend that Man o' War is not a thoroughbred and not eligible for the stud book when she decided to send Batileship after the coveted prize is not known, but his victory certainly is stimulating to breeding circles on this side of the water. On his return, Battleship probably will go into stud service immediately and any doubt as to whether steeplechasing would be revived in this country seems erased.

It was a switch in plans by Mrs. going to England instead of remain-Scott which resulted in Battleship ing at Montpelier. Battleship had been assigned to stud duty and had served before he was sent back into the training period that finally led to his great triumph.

Another interesting angle is that Battleship won the "mad race of turfdom" after having suffered bowed tendons. At one period of his career, his legs filled out and it was thought that he was through for competitive purposes. However, rest and good handling helped nature restore his legs to the point that they were capable of withstanding punishment that few have been able to take.

The little chestnut horse was only one of the many 1926 foals of Man o'War.

He competed on the flat and was spotted for his courage and occasional speed. He did win a few stake races in the colors of Walter J. Salmon, New York sportsman who bred him along with others of his Mereworth Stud. Battleship did most of his flat running in the East.

In 1932, Mrs. Scott purchased Battleship from Salmon at a figure said to have been $10,000. She was adding potential jumpers to her stable at the time and also bought Annapolis. After she had superintended the early training of the horse, she turned him over to Selby Burch for conditioning.

It was under the guidance of the Washington trainer that Battleship forged to the front in steeplechase racing. With Carroll Bassett, gentleman jockey who saw yesterday's race, incidentally, in the saddle, Battleship began winning his way and developing the hope of Mrs. Scott that he would be a success at Aintree.

In the summer of 1934, at Belmont Park, Battleship proved his right to serious consideration for the English classic. He won four races in a month, under Bassett's handling. In the National Hunt Club Steeplechase Handicap, he showed that weight would not stop him by carrying 170 pounds to victory. In the Aiker Hunters' Steeplechase he set a new record for the course, running the 2½ miles in 4 minutes 46 3-5 seconds. In the Roslyn Steeplechase, with 163 pounds on his back, he came from far back to win by four lengths. His masterpiece, however, was his triumph in the Belmont Grand National Steeplechase, when he turned back the best this country had to offer in timbertoppers, including Joseph E. Widener's Arc Light, a previous winner of that race.

Battleship was foaled by the mare, Quarantine. She was the daughter by Sea Sick, a French sire who was a great competitor. With the background of Man o' War and Sea Sick, Battleship came by his name on both sides of the family.

In passing it might be well to give Noel Lang, great gantleman jockey, an "assist" when Battleship's victory is mentioned. He rode Mrs. Scott's Troublemaker to defeat but it was the knowledge that he imparted to the owner as well as handlers of the horse that were invaluable in Battleship's preparation.

And if Man o' War leans over to his groom this morning and whispers something about trying to be entered in the Kindergarten Stakes at Bowie next Friday—well, just pardon the old fellow.

2d Embezzlement Charged to Ousted Montgomery Aide

A second indictment charging embezzlement was returned at Rockville, Md., yesterday against E. J. Gray, former Montgomery County building inspector.

Yesterday's indictment charged the former county official with embezzling $710 of county funds. Gray was dismissed by the county commissioners last fall after being indicted for embezzling $244.

State's Attorney James H. Pugh said the second indictment charged misappropriation of funds in the issuance of oil burner permits during Gray's entire term of office.

Central Power Fear of Timid, Says Richberg

Declares Business Must Accept Co-operative Rule as Safe.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25.—Donald R. Richberg, formerly a close Roosevelt adviser, today said a major obstacle to sustained economic recovery was the inability of many businessmen, bankers and politicians to accept the contention that "safe co-operative control of a competitive system can be evolved."

Speaking at the semiannual meeting of the Academy of Political Science, Richberg said those "fearful of concentrated money power" had visions, in such a system, "of an ultimate monopolistic control of commerce."

And, he added, those fearful of "centralized political power have visions of an ultimate governmental control of business."

Flays Obstructionists.

The "perennial obstructionist' he denounced as a "timid creature who objects to every enlargement of human power, on the ground that it will be abused."

"By bellowing against everything big, by snarling at every great organizer of human effort, by denouncing every large organization of collective power as a conspiracy against individual liberty and a menace to the security of the little men, this obstructor covers up his own sense of inferiority, his own inability to grapple with large problems, his own suspicions of . . . anyone big enough for a big job, so that he may pose before his own mirror as a deep-thinking guardian of the general welfare," he declared.

Bailey Makes Plea.

Senator Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, suggesting an end to Governmental policies which he said tended to "impair incentive," asserted the Administration must "reduce spending, whatever the consequences, and increase revenue."

The present economic system, he asserted at another point, "will not withstand the strain of strict and vast centralization and regimentation on the one hand, and it cannot survive its own failure to meet the aspirations of the people, on the other."

Whitney Denies He Set Up Trust To Save 'Stake'

New York, March 25 (AP).—Richard Whitney, expelled former five-term president of the New York Stock Exchange, who has pleaded guilty to two grand larceny charges, today denied having set up any trust for himself, "or anybody else," to survive the wreck of his Wall Street firm.

The question was asked by Bankruptcy Referee Irwin Kurtz at a hearing which also developed that Whitney's personal assets consisted of real estate, insurance and a portfolio of stock in a variety of enterprises.

The bankrupt broker's description of what he had left included a detailed and at times apparently prideful inventory of the pigs, chickens, horses and cows on his farm estate in Somerset County, N. J.

Borglum Assails U. S. on Birthday

Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, celebrated his sixty-seventh birthday here yesterday by criticizing the Government "for harboring non-productive, incompetent no-accounts."

The bald, stocky, energetic sculptor is best known as the creator of the memorial to the Southern Confederacy on the face of Stone Mountain, Ga., and the National Memorial on Mount Rushmore, in the South Dakota's Black Hills. He is currently working on the latter project.

"A smug, untrained civilization is cluttering up our life," he observed yesterday. "Dangers, enemies, jealousies and hogs in the trough are to be found in all professional matters. Dishonesty and incompetency give any straight-shooting, square-dealing man a battle every day."

Woman Is Killed By Piano Stool

San Diego, Calif., March 25 (AP). The body of Mrs. Florilla Lee Crolis, 67, was found today in her little ocean beach cottage where a killer bludgeoned her to death with a piano stool.

Investigating officers said they were unable to uncover a club or motive in the slaying, which was similar to others in an unsolved chain which began eight years ago when the mutilated body of Virginia Brooks, 10, was found stuffed in a sack near here.

Mrs. Crolis had been separated from her husband six years. She had been dead 36 hours.

Most recent woman victim of a slayer in this area was Miss Ruth Muir, 48, Y. W. C. A., secretary, who was beaten to death at nearby La Jolla 17 months ago.

Just a 'Tired Business Woman'

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

A picture she drew of herself as a "tired business woman" yesterday helped Screen Actress Claire Dodd, shown in a Los Angeles court, win a divorce decree from Milton Strauss, real estate broker. She said he would insist they step out on evenings even when she was tired from long, hard days at her movie studio.

Sergeant Gives Blood to Save Beaten Woman

Landis Charged With Assault With Intent to Kill His Wife.

Sergt. M. C. Mason, of the Twenty-third Engine Company, yesterday gave his blood in a transfusion to save the life of Mrs. Blanche Gertrude Landis, 22. The woman is near death in Casualty Hospital from a beating given her, police say, by her husband, James L. Landis, 23, rookie attached to the fire boat.

Mason was one of seven firemen who submitted to tests yesterday to find the right type of blood for the transfusion. Mrs. Landis is the daughter of another fireman, James Beckert, of No. 17 Engine Company.

Meanwhile, Landis, held since early Thursday, a few hours after his wife was found, her skull crushed, on Twenty Fourth near Taylor street northeast, was charged with assault with intent to kill.

The charge was placed against Landis after his attorneys, Jean M. Boardman, and T. Edward O'Connell asked Justice Jennings Bailey in District Court for a writ of habeas corpus. They said Landis, booked for investigation but not accused, was being held illegally.

Inspceor Bernard W. Thompson, chief of the Detective Bureau indicated police would seek to have the man held without bail.

Virginia Mother Found in Thicket, Dead, Throat Cut

Blackstone, Va., March 25 (AP).—The body of Mrs. Jeanette Worsham, 28-year-old weaving mill employe, was found early today in a small thicket on the outskirts of Blackstone. Her throat had been slashed and her skull fractured.

Commonwealth's Attorney T. Freeman Epes issued a warrant for the arrest of Willie Allen, about 30, charging him with murder. Police have been unable to locate Allen, who is employed in the weaving mill where Mrs. Worsham worked.

Welles' Son Fined $75 in Driving Case

Cambridge, Mass., March 25 (AP).—Benjamin Welles 2d, 21, a Harvard student and son of Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles, today was convicted of driving an automobile dangerously and fined $75. He appealed.

Welles was acquitted of knowingly leaving the scene of an accident.

David L. Watson, a truck driver, testified a handle of Welles' car caught in his clothing and that he was injured when dragged 25 to 30 feet.

World Buying Of U. S. Goods Rises Sharply

February Exports Tripled, Imports Doubled Over Month in 1933.

By the Associated Press.

The world poured $99,648,000 into American pockets in February, the Commerce Department reported yesterday.

Foreign demand for United States goods reached the highest point in several years and thus tended to strengthen national purchasing power at a time when officials and business men alike were groping for a recession cure.

Since the first of the year, this country has sold $218,355,000 more goods abroad than it has bought, whereas in the similar period last year the United States bought $62,364,000 more than it sold, due to food purchases after the 1936 drought. Compared with 1933, February exports have nearly tripled and imports doubled.

Imports Decline.

A total of $262,733,000 worth of American goods was shipped out of the country this February, compared with $233,125,000 worth in the same month last year. Imports declined to $163,085,000 this February from $277,709,000 in February, 1937.

Although domestic automobile sales have been affected by the recession about as severely as any line of trade, February exports of motor vehicles were higher than a year ago.

The result of 1937's improved crops also showed up in this February's exports of $25,033,000 worth of grains. This compared with imports of $9,579,000 worth of grain in February last year.

Rearmament A Factor.

World rearmement also was a factor. Airplane metal and oil exports were substantially higher. However, shipments of certain other raw materials, including cotton and rubber products, have declined.

On the buying side, America imported smaller quantities of vegetable oils, coffee, cocoa, furs, hides, crude rubber, raw wool, raw silk, precious stones, metals and fertilizers.

Altogether, imports of manufactured foods decreased 29 per cent, and of finished manufactures, 21 per cent.

Air Pictures Planned Of East Va. Farmlands

The Agricultural Adjustment Administration's 1938 program of aerial photography to check performance under the soil conservation program calls for photographing 1,417 square miles of eastern Virginia farm lands.

The administration's contract with Fairchild Aerial Surveys, Inc., calls for aerial photography of 502 square miles in Accomac County, 21 in Isle of Wight, 110 in Nansemond, 207 in Norfolk, 239 in Northhampton and 338 in Princess Anne.

America's Role As Peacemaker Disputed Here

Economic Co-operation Parley Deadlocked By Isolationists.

Failing after two hours of debate to agree on a minimum program for American foreign policy acceptable to isolationists and exponents of collective security, delegates to the Conference on World Economic Co-operation voted yesterday to include in the report of their proceedings statements of both viewpoints.

Controversy centered on 700 words, headed "General Political Insecurity," included in the 30-page report on international economic co-operation submitted to the conference by a committee of economists, educators and publicists. The disputed section of the report contained a statement in behalf of collective security, contending that application of any world economic program is impossible "so long as statesmen and peoples everywhere are confronted by a continuous menace of war."

Fearing that argument over this section of the report might jeopardize agreement on less controversial recommendations for economic policy, the conference steering committee submitted to a plenary session a compromise statement on "Political Factors," intended to conciliate advocates of neutrality and fuller American participation in world affairs.

Print Both Statements.

After rejection of the substitute motion by a vote of 101-96, delegates unanimously agreed to print in their final report both statements, accompanied by explanations of their position from both schools of thought.

Earlier in the afternoon the conference adopted a resolution introduced by Oswald Garrison Villard, former editor of The Nation, praising Secretary Hull for "his admirable leadership in calling upon 29 nations to co-operate with the United States in succoring and offering asylum to German-Austrian victims of the present German despotism."

Arguing against adoption of the steering committee's compromise statement on foreign policy, Arthur Stein, delegate from the United Federal Workers, declared that organized labor is less interested in the harmony of any particular group of peace organizations than in constructive and immediate action in the present world crisis.

"We not only reject the meaningless substitute offered by the steering committee," he said, "but we go further than the original report and demand repeal of the neutrality act and lifting of the embargo on nations which are victims of aggressors."

Dorothy Detzer, of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom, pleaded for a statement which would force no delegate to compromise on honest principles.

Would Condone Hitler.

"This is the sort of thing nations must do—pool their ideas and find a third way," she said.

References to injustices in the Treaty of Versailles, contained in the compromise motion, amount to "condoning Hitler's action in Austria and Spain," Joseph Lash, secretary of the American Student Union, charged. Economic co-operation with the Fascist nations would merely equip them for a future further aggression, he said.

Representing the Teachers Union, of New York City, Ethel Brook said: "We cannot recognize any separation of political and economic issues. Labor forces in this country feel strongly the importance of stopping the Fascists now."

"The immediate results of an American war to stop fascism would be to establish fascism in this country," countered Benjamin C. Marsh, of the People's Lobby. "We are the last Nation that has a chance to be semisane, and war would ruin that chance. Let's make America safe for Americans."

92% of Farmers Ask Cotton Quotas

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Wallace yesterday announced the official count on the farmer referendum held March 12 on invoking marketing quotas on 1938 cotton was aproved by 92.1 per cent of the growers voting. The vote was 1,406,088 for quotas and 12,940 against.

Results of other referenda, held the same date were: On flue-cured tobacco, 219,842 for and 35,253 against. On dark tobacco, 39,328 for and 9,460 against, a majority of 80.6 per cent. The referenda required favorable votes of two-thirds of those voting.

Wide Inquiry Into TVA by 2 Houses Is Voted

TVA

arising from dissension among the three TVA directors and the Presidential ousting of Chairman Morgan remained the unknown factor.

Senator George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska, TVA "father," whose amended resolution was adopted yesterday, has announced his intention not to participate and has suggested "impartial" investigators.

At the same time, Norris made it clear he would protest the appointment of any such outstanding TVA critics as Senators Bridges and King. King followed Norris yesterday in announcing he would not accept membership on the joint group, but Bridges is anxious to take part in the inquiry.

Provision for a joint inquiry by both House and Senate was protested bitterly by Senator William E. Borah (Republican), of Idaho, before approval of the resolution. Borah said he had never known of joint investigation "to accomplish anything," and cited the Joint Congressional Reorganization Committee as an example of inadequacy.

"Responsible to Neither."

"I would far rather see two separate investigations conducted by the two bodies than one investigation conducted by both houses and therefore responsible to neither," said Borah. "It will lead to a very great delay."

Barkley declared Borah did the House a "rank injustice" when he suggested the Senate had been "bluffed" into the joint inquiry, but the Idahoan insisted that "this is not the kind of investigation we want" and predicted the joint group would find it impossible to meet before adjournment. Senator L. J. Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, joined Borah in the protest.

Senator Norris originally had asked for a Senate investigation, but Barkley's compromise providing for a two-House study was offered as a substitute yesterday, with the Nebraskan's assent. Norris retained nominal authorship of the resolution by unanimous consent of the Senate.

President Must Sign.

Presentation by Barkley of his motion in the form of a "joint resolution" was unexpected, as in that form it requires signature by the President. The usual procedure is to adopt a "concurrent resolution," not requiring White House approval. But the measure was in no danger of a veto, as the President already has vigorously denied he is opposed to a Congressional inquiry.

Incorporated in the resolution on Barkley's motion were the TVA charges by Bridges and King that Norris had termed "insulting." But they were rephrased into more moderate language, and compressed into 8 points instead of 23.

Points at Issue.

They require the joint committee to investigate the following points:

Whether there is truth in Dr. Morgan's charges of an attempt to defraud the Government; whether the TVA has been administered in a "clandestine manner" and whether by action of his co-directors, Harcourt A. Morgan and David E. Lilienthal, the former chairman "has not had an opportunity to present his views before Congressional committees."

Whether the TVA aided large corporations by supplying power at a cheaper rate than to municipalities and other corporations.

Whether the TVA has complied with requirements that it submit to Congress allocations of cost to various activities under its control.

Audits Mentioned.

Whether the agency has interfered with the Comptroller General's audits of the authority.

Whether it has offered "unfair inducements" to persuade industries to locate in the Tennessee Valley.

Whether it has forced rural customers to purchase expensive equipment under threat of refusing to supply electricity.

Whether the electric rates of the agency "provide a legitimate, honest yardstick of equitable rates of private industry."

Whether "waste, extravagance, mismanagement and illegal conduct by the board has dissipated funds appropriated to the TVA."

'Dissension' Included.

Points previously covered in the Barkley-Norris resolutions ask investigation into the "efficient and economical" administration of the act and the effect of "dissension" on the work of the agency.

The Barkley substitute also asks determination of whether any member of the TVA board has held illegal offices or assisted private interests in litigation affecting the TVA, and the effects of such actions.

Other points to be specifically covered in the investigation:

Financial loss to municipalities or farm organizations by preventing their purchase of TVA power.

Activities if any by private power companies affecting the decisions of municipalities or farm organizations on the purchase of TVA power.

Any injury to the "public interests" by private activities to defeat the TVA program.

Whether TVA has complied with the law in maintaining principal offices in the immediate vicinity of Muscle Shoals, Alabama.

Norris 'Heart-Broken.'

Senator Norris told the Senate he was "heart-broken" over the friction within the board which he attributed to the "jealousy" of Dr. Morgan. But he asserted his opinion that no honest investigation would "disclose any fraud, any dishonesty, any corruption of any member of the board including Dr. Morgan."

Norris said he felt the Federal Trade Commission was better equipped to make the inquiry, and warned that both the Vice President and the Speaker "will have a difficult time getting unbiased members."

The veteran Nebraska legislator berated Senator Bridges for circulation of the "jackass story" that TVA lost more than $4,000 on the purchase of a jackass for experimental purposes.

"The truth is that they bought a jackass, sold it, and made $50," said Norris. "It did not involve thousands of dollars. I could tell you many similar stories being used like this against the agency."

Open House Held in New Police Court Building

2d Bill Passed For Expanding District Airport

Port

all airport legislation until the House approved the Camp Springs' measure recommended by the commission and passed by the Senate, he offered no objection to the Military road bill sponsored by Senator Copeland (Democrat), of New York.

A similar measure, introduced by Chairman May, of the House Military Affairs Committee, is pending in the House and probably will be passed before Congress adjourns.

Meanwhile, there appears little prospect of Congressional action on the Smith Gravelly Point bill or the Wood Suitland site proposal now before the House Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds.

It likewise is doubtful that the House will approve the Camp Sp ings airport bill in view of the opposition of the Navy Department and the more recent indication by the President that he favors a site closer to the Capital.

Taking up the consent calendar for the second time this session, the Senate passed one other minor District bill and almost approved the taxicab liability insurance measure that has been before Congress almost as long as the airport controversy.

The minor measure limits the duties of the chief clerk of the Health Department for administrative reasons. It has passed the House and so now goes to the White House.

The taxicab insurance bill was passed without question, only to be blocked a half hour later when Senator Andrews (Democrat), Florida, gave notice for himself and Senator Reynolds (Democrat), North Carolina, that one or the other would move to reconsider the action.

The notice has the effect of holding up the legislation indefinitely and probably will result in killing it for this session unless Senator King or other members of the Senate District Committee insist on a vote on the motion to reconsider.

Andrews explained that he is opposed to the Senate amendment to the House bill prohibiting an association of taxicab owners to file a bond with the Public Utilities Commission for all its cabs or to maintain a sinking fund in lieu of an insurance policy.

"I'm also afraid it will bring about an increase in taxi rates here," he said.

The Public Utilities Commission has been urging enactment of the taxicab liability legislation since 1930. The bill now before the Senate passed the House last July.

The Senate passed over the omnibus bill to increase the number fo Federal judges throughout the country, including the addition of three in Washington. Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, suggested that more time should be given to the discussion than is allowed under the consent calendar procedure.

Highway Cleared For 200,000 Lured By Cherry Blooms

given Monday at 8:30 p. m. at the Tidal Basin, if the weather is clear. In case of rain, the display will be deferred to the next clear night.

A bright sun and rising temperature favored the crowds of sightseers yesterday, but park police reported no unusual jams occurred. Officials said that "no matter how many visitors come to Washington," police would be able to handle them. Hotel proprietors noted increasing influx of sightseers, but said that plenty of rooms are still available.

In addition to the spectacle in the Tidal Basin-East Potomac Park area, approximately 2,000 trees will afford another striking display at Kenwood, Md., a short distance beyond the District line. The Kenwood trees were raised in America from Japanese stock.

Special traffic and parking regulations will go into effect in the cherry-blossom area at 1 p. m. today. All policemen will be on duty tomorrow and extra officers will be detailed to the First Second and Fourth precincts.

Maj. Brown stated that Washingtonians who must see the blossoms Saturday and Sunday will view them in the best of all ways if they will walk to them from the foot of Fourteenth or Seventeenth streets northwest.

Maryland traffic regulations were drawn up at the conference yesterday between Sergt. Ralph Brown, commander of the Prince Georges County police, and Sergt. C. B. Durham, of the State police substation at Laurel, Md.

The 12 State officers at Laurel will be supplemented by six others, and the entire available county force of seven men stationed at Hyattsville also will be on duty.

Arthur Godfrey, WJSV broadcaster, will recognize the advent of spring and the cherry blossoms on Monday, when he will move his Sun Dial program from 7 to 9 a. m. out to the Tidal Basin.

Senate Rejects House's Slash In Estate, Gift Tax Exemptions

Tax

this morning, the Senate group is expected to consider some possible further revision in the estate levy.

Other action taken by the committee yesterday:

Approved an amendment by Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, providing that corporations which had started to liquidate subsidiaries under 1935 tax laws would not have to comply with later regulations enacted in 1936. Only about five corporations would be affected.

Banks Exempted.

Approved an amendment by Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, to exempt banks in liquidation from corporation income taxes. The income taxes would be applied if the institutions were found able to pay 100 cents on each dollar.

Chairman Pat Harrison announced estimates showing the Treasury would collect $45,400,000 in the 1938 calendar year from the committee's proposed 15 per cent flat tax on capital gains, as against $42,200,000 under House capital gains tax provisions.

A strong group within the committee today will seek means of encouraging personal holding companies to dissolve if they want to, without paying prohibitive taxes. Senator George, one spokesman for the group, said such dissolution not only would aid the turnover in credit, but should result in larger revenue from assets distributed to stockholders.

Dissolution Prevented.

It was pointed out that many personal holding companies were organized before income taxation became an important element in business planning, and without thought of tax avoidance. Since use of some personal holding companies for tax avoidance purposes all have been under Administration and Congressional fire and taxes have been imposed which virtually prevent dissolution of those desiring to go out of operation.

Senator William H. King (Democrat), of Utah, another member of the committee, said last night he will move for elimination of the 25-cent per gallon additional tax on liquor imposed by the House.

He also will ask modification of the present excise tax on cosmetics, attempted without success by the five women members of the House.

Another effort will be made to eliminate excise taxes on imported pork imposed by the House over Administration opposition.

"This isn't a tariff bill," said King. "If we want to increase our exports we must expect to increase our imports. You can't maintain a one-lane road."

Japan to Take 'Steps' to End Alaska Fishing boats out of the Bristol Bay area, thus permitting this Government through its Bureau of Fisheries and Coast Guard to keep a better check on the taking of salmon in those waters.

State

The important phase of the remainder of the Japanese assurances is the offer to take necessary and proper steps to prevent Japanese from taking salmon "if and when conclusive evidence is presented that any Japanese vessels engage in salmon fishing on a commercial scale in the waters in question." The Japanese long have contended that they have issued no licenses to their nationals for salmon fishing in those waters.

Evidence Necessary.

But they do issue licenses to Japanese fishermen for the taking of crabs in the Bering Sea, and this Government has contended that these fishermen have engaged in salmon fishing. Under the agreement this Government must present "conclusive evidence" that these Japanese fishermen are exceeding the authority of their licenses before the Tokyo government will act.

Collection of such evidence for presentation to the Japanese government will be the job of the Bureau of Fisheries and the Coast Guard. After announcing receipt of the Japanese assurances regarding the Alaska salmon question, the State Department issued the following statement:

"The American Government will continue to give constant and practical attention to the question of the Alaska fisheries and the question of ways and means to insure the protection and perpetuation of the highly important food resource and industries involved. To this end the fullest possible collaboration of the appropriate agencies of the Government will be utilized. In accordance with this objective, and for the general purpose of removing cause for apprehension on the part of American fishing industries, the Bureau of Fisheries and the Coast Guard will continue to be charged with the duty of observing fishing activities in Alaskan waters."

Friendliness Praised.

This Government, through the State Department, expressed appreciation of the assurances "which the Japanese government has given in the spirit of collaboration in the efforts of the American Government to conserve and protect the Alaskan salmon fishery resources." Gratification also was expressed that the "discussions have been conducted by the two governments concerned in a friendly manner"

"In view of the above assurances," the State Department communique added, "it is evident that if ever Japanese vessels, which were present in the waters in question to engage in crab fishing or in production of fish meal, caught salmon in commercial quantities in the past, such fishing was conducted without the knowledge of the Japanese government.

"Furthermore, these assurances of the Japanese government are regarded as regulating the situation until such time as the problems involved may call for, and circumstances may render practicable, the taking of other measures.

Outside Our Waters.

In announcing the agreement, the State Department for the first time disclosed a summary of the representations this Government made to the Japanese government last November 22 and which have been the subject of intensive negotiation ever since. The delicacy of the situation resulted from the fact that, though the Alaskan salmon stocks were being adversely affected, the alleged Japanese activities took place outside of the territorial waters of this country.

In the statement of November 22 this Government pointed out to Japan that "beginning in 1930, and in every year since then, there have been present in the Bristol Bay area of western Alaska during the salmon fishing season Japanese fishing fleets made up of floating canneries and auxiliary vessels varying in type from small motorboats to diesel-powered trawlers."

"As long as the activities of these vessels were confined to the taking of crabs which abound in the Bering Sea," the representations continued, "they gave the American Government no cause for serious concern. Recently, however, evidence has accumulated which indicates that the Japanese fishing vessels operating in Bristol Bay are engaging in salmon fishing, thus raising the question of the protection and perpetuation of the salmon resources in these and other Alaskan waters."

Concern Over Purpose.

This Government also pointed out that for two years as the result of the Japanese government's salmon fishing survey "the regular appearance in Bristol Bay of the fishery survey vessels, coupled with the operation of Japanese fishing fleets, has caused deep concern among large sections of the American public with regard to the object and significance of such activities."

"Now reports from reliable sources," the representations to Japan asserted, "have become increasingly numerous that Japanese fishing vessels operating in Bristol Bay are beginning to intercept the salmon runs of these waters. Such reports are becoming more and more insistent and reliable, and during the last season their authenticity has been supported by impressive affidavits and by actual photographs of the fishing operations in question.

"The American Government has understood from assurances given by the Japanese government to the American Embassy at Tokyo that no licenses were being granted to Japanese fishing vessels to fish for salmon in the Bristol Bay area. Nevertheless, evidence which continues to reach the American Government raises a strong presumption that Japanese nationals have actually begun salmon fishing on a substantial scale in the waters in question.

U. S. Welfare Endangered.

"The fact of such fishing being without authority of the Japanese government renders it of no less concern to the affected American interests. The persistence by Japanese nationals in such fishing operations in Alaskan waters would inevitably cause among American interests the gravest anxiety for the future of the salmon fisheries, with which is inseparably joined the employment and economic welfare of large sections of the American people."

The Government, however, put the weight of its representations on its "distinct concern" with which it viewed "the depletion of the salmon resources of Alaska." It pointed out that these resources had been developed and preserved primarily by the United States Government in cooperation with private interests, that Congress had enacted strict regulations regarding the taking of salmon within American waters and that this Government had spent an average of $358,000 annually over the last ten years to conserve Alaskan salmon.

The State Department argued that "for all practical purposes the salmon industry is in fact a part of the economic life of the Pacific Northwest Coast" and that "the economic welfare of the Pacific Coast and the perpetuation of the salmon industry are peculiarly interdependent." It pointed out that the Alaska salmon industry had been developed to a point to engage 117 modern canneries, employing 25,000 persons—with 24 canneries in the Bristol Bay area. It pointed out also that many thousands of other persons in the shipbuilding, transportation, insurance, banking and fishing equipment fields were dependent on the Alaska salmon industry.

The representations also said 80 per cent of the public revenues of Alaska are derived from the salmon fishing industry.

In conclusion the note undertook to press upon the Japanese "the seriousness of the problem involved in this situation and the urgency of there being taken early and effective action to dispose of it." The Government further asserted that "it must be taken as a sound principle of justice that an industry such as described which has been built up by the nationals of one country cannot in fairness be left to be destroyed by the nationals of other countries."

Nazis Oust U. S. Correspondent For Story of Vienna Atrocity

of his plebiscite tour of Greater Germany.

This was the meaning of the swift military occupation of Austria, he said.

He explained not many troops were needed there, as the joyous welcome German soldiers received from Austrians showed.

His compelling reason for ordering such large scale military action was:

"I wanted to show the world we were acting in deadly earnest.

Problem Is Closed.

"I wanted to show the world that this problem admits of no further discussion."

Hitler came here by airplane for the speech, the first in his series of 15 talks to be made prior to the voting on April 10 on the issue of Austro-German union and election of a new Reichstag.

It was his first visit here in two years and he received a tremendous ovation.

Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering, Hitler's right-hand man, meanwhile was sailing down the Danube to speak in Vienna tomorrow night.

Direct Action Hinted.

The Reichsfuehrer, creator of the greater Germany, dropped no hint as to where he planned his next move.

Many of his followers in this region however saw hopeful significance in the fact he voiced strong faith in direct action, in this Baltic City which is midway between the free city of Danzig and Memel, formerly German but now Lithuanian.

Hitler did not specifically mention Danzig or Memel or the German minority in Czechoslovakia.

But he emphatically declared that when decisions affecting the destinies of German populations were to be made, they would be made by Germany without asking the permission of anyone.

"Justice in Own Hands."

"If the world is deaf to all pleas for justice," he exclaimed, "then the Reich must take justice into its own hands.

"* * * our text is 'help yourself and God will help you' and God has helped us."

His audience roared approval.

Justifying his annexation of Austria, Hitler compared the regime of former Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg with the counter-reformation in Austria centuries ago.

Just as thousands left that country then, rather than give up their faith, so thousands of Nazis left Schuschnigg's Austria rather than give up their faith in Germany's future.

Again and again, Hitler said, such fugitives "came across the border to me and cried out 'when will we finally be set free?'"

The Fuehrer said he finally called the Austrian chancellor to Berchtesgaden, for the conference held February 12, and added:

"I told him 'Herr Schuschnigg, you are oppressing a country without justification and that country is my country just as much as it is yours.'"

The crowd laughed boisterously when Hitler asserted he offered to run against Schuschnigg in an open Austrian election "and let the people decide."

"I warned him," he said, "that if a new crisis arose the German people of Austria could count on my help."

The fuehrer said his triumphant Austrian followers would not indulge in an orgy of vengeance against their former persecutors although "it would be just if the people took vengeance now. I know how richly earned that vengeance would be."

"The People Shall Speak."

With great emotion he referred to the hanging of 13 Nazi putschists by Schuschnigg's government in 1934.

"These men whose only crime was love of country," he said, "were not even granted death by the bullet—they were hanged."

Indirectly referring to other Nazi casualties in the ill-fated putsch of July in that year, Hitler said "over 400 were murdered and approximately 2,000 shot—those were victims of the Schuschnigg regime."

He charged that the powers had given Austria "sham sovereignity because they wanted to keep Germany impotent."

They cared not, he said, whether the country "was economically doomed nor that her deaths far exceeded births."

He asserted he had called the plebiscite for April 10 "because I am a better democrat than so many democrats. The people shall speak out."

number can climb to top ranks, and they have to prove their efficiency.

He said creation of a Federal committee by Secretary Morgenthau to map plans for Federal aid to business grew out of the small businessmen's conference, following which many complaints were received of inability to obtain bank credit.

By the United Press.

London, March 25.—Great Britain and France tonight supported the United States proposal for an international committee to remove political refugees from Austria, Germany and other countries. Diplomats and informed Fascist quarters said Italy would reject the plan.

Authoritative sources said a favorable British reply would be forwarded on the proposal of United States Secretary of State Cordell Hull for creation of a special committee to deal with the problem of "unwanted minorities" in the newly expanded territories of the Third Reich.

It appeared that a similar reply would be sent to Washington from France, which for many years has adhered to a policy of affording asylum to political refugees.

Premier Leon Blum of France is a Jew and is said to have been moved deeply by the plight of Austria's 260,000 Jews since Germany's annexation of their country two weeks ago. Furthermore, the popular front government of France is anti-Fascist and opposed to any racial or political oppression.

Satisfaction was expressed in British quarters over President Roosevelt's explanation that the State Department's invitations to 29 nations in Europe and South America were designed to provide havens for minorities in Russia, Spain and Italy, as well as Austria and Germany.

Of the nine European countries receiving the invitations—Britain, Italy, France, the Scandinavian countries, Belgium, The Netherlands and Switzerland—only Italy appeared to have given the proposal a cold shoulder.

Premier Mussolini was expected to consult his brother-in-arms at the other end of the Rome-Berlin axis, Fuehrer Adolf Hitler, before replying to Secretary Hull's note, which was presented to the foreign office in Rome Thursday afternoon by United States Ambassador William Phillips.

Belgium to Co-operate.

Brussels, March 25 (AP).—Official sources tonight said Belgium was ready to co-operate fully with the United States on Secretary of State Cordell Hull's suggestion for an international committee to help solve the problem of refugees fleeing Austria and Germany.

Cincinnati Groups Aid.

Cincinnati, March 25 (AP).—Two leading Jewish organizations with headquarters in Cincinnati today pledged their support of Secretary Hull's proposal for the evacuation of political refugees from Germany and Austria.

The Union of American Hebrew Congregations, representing 60,000 Jews in 300 congregations, and B'nai B'rith, claiming memberships in 30 foreign counties, sent messages to Secretary Hull.

Commitment Of McLean in Md. Questioned

Guardian Reports Courts There Were Without Jurisdiction.

Ending a two month's investigation of the legality of the confinement in a Maryland sanitarium of Edward B. McLean, former Washington publisher and sportsman, Austin F. Canfield, guardian ad litem for Mr. McLean, yesterday told District Court, in a voluminous report, that in his opinion the Maryland courts did not have jurisdiction to adjudge McLean of unsound mind and send him to a hospital at Towson, Md.

In his report, Canfield stated that McLean owned no property in Maryland, that he had been a resident of the District for a lifetime, and that he should be brought to the District for a hearing.

The report suggested that Admiral Bristol "be relieved of his duties as ancillary committee for McLean and raised the question of whether lunacy proceedings should be brought in the District of Columbia in accordance with D. C. laws, and what fees Admiral Bristol should receive for his services, as well as those of his attorney, Neil Burkinshaw. The report showed there were claims of $356,719.99 pending against McLean. Admiral Bristol was appointed ancillary committee by the District Court.

"I am told," Canfield wrote, "that unless some satisfactory arrangement can be made to settle these claims, some creditors have engaged counsel for the purpose of making an attack on the spendthrift clause in the will of John R. McLean." It was explained McLean was the beneficiary only of a life income in the estate left by his father.

The report pointed out that Friendship, palatial McLean home on Wisconsin avenue, was unencumbered and formed a portion of the present McLean estate. Also mining properties and bank stocks are producing income.

It was recommended that "serious consideration" be given the appointment of a co-trustee, in addition to the American Security & Trust Co.

Canfield stated in the report he had interviewed McLean and was satisfied that he was of unsound mind.

The report was received and was taken by Justice Bailey, who offered no comment.

Admiral Bristol and Attorney Burkinshaw asked permission of the court to submit a memorandum opinion Wednesday. They stated they were convinced McLean had been lawfully committed.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Concert by the Trio Classique (Arturo Papalardo, piano; Hendrik Essers, violin; Emile Simon, violoncello) in the Grafton Hotel Friday night. Program: Trio in B major, Op. 8 (Brahms), Bolero and Polo Gitano (Tomas Breton), Trio in B flat, Op. 21 (Dvorak).

Cordially received by an audience that filled the studio of the League of American Pen Women in the Grafton Hotel, the recently organized Trio Classique formally took its place last evening among the local chamber music organizations. The initial concert demonstrated that Arturo Papalardo, Hendrik Essers and Emile Simon collaborate with consentience in interpretation, and that it is evidently their intent to present programs other than the stereotyped kind. It is not often that Tomas Breton, for instance, is listed with Brahms and Dvorak.

Brahms was one of the most self-critical of composers. His B major pianoforte trio was first published in 1854, and long after it had become popular with ensembles and the public, he completely rewrote it in 1891. The second version is one we hear today, and only the concert-goers of the older generation know how drastic the changes were. The original draft had more spontaneity, but the revision deepened the musical import.

Little known in this country, Tomas Breton, who died in 1923, devoted most of his efforts to the establishment of a Spanish school of opera, but found time as well for some attractive orchestral and chamber music. His Bolero, played last night, is a somewhat romanticized treatment of that dance rhythm, but the Polo Gitano is more stark and authentically topical.

Dvorak's B flat Trio came early among his many works for instrumental combinations, and is not frequently played. While the Bohemian flavor is not as strong as in the "Dumky" Trio, the music is nevertheless unmistakably racial, and the work is rich in melodic invention.

The girls had the affirmative side on the topic: "Resolved, That Political Isolation Is Impracticable for the United States."

Dr. Gabrielson Hails Wild Life Week a Success

Financial Problems of Restoration Solved, Conservationists Told.

The success of National Wildlife Restoration Week has exceeded the greatest expectations of its sponsors, declared Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the Biological Survey, to a group of conservationists at a dinner at the Willard last night.

Gabrielson, who was highly praised by Senator Key Pittman, of Nevada, for his "good work" as head of the Biological Survey, stated that the American conservation movement had been making "the biggest advance in its history." He lauded the Pittman-Robertson act, providing for Federal aid to States setting up wildlife refuges.

Asserting that the refuge program must be completed, Gabrielson expressed the need for another two or three million acres of land to be added to the six to eight million acres already set aside for refuges. "Just because wildlife week has been a success, don't think that there isn't anything left to do," he warned.

Representative A. Willis Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia declared that Congress is showing "more interest in wildlife preservation than I've ever known." The General Wildlife Federation, under whose auspices last night's dinner was held, "is getting more popular support than any conservation organization ever has had before," he added.

A similar note of optimism was struck by Carl Shoemaker, secretary of the General Wildlife Federation. Asserting that over $200,000 of wildlife stamps had been sold during the week, he stated that "the financial problems of the wildlife restoration movement have been solved."

Counselor Vincente Valdes Rodriguez, of the Cuban Embassy, assured his audience that "Cuba is vitally interested in the preservation of wildlife." Representative A. H. Andresen (Republican), of Minnesota, also spoke.

Futile Investigation.

Complaints that business—especially small business—is unable to obtain adequate credit accommodation have been heard for a long time.

As a result of such charges, the Federal Reserve Banks were authorized in 1934 to make direct loans to business for the furnishing of working capital, and to participate in such loans or discount them. To supply the need of capital for relatively long periods, the RFC was also empowered to make advances to business if loans were "adequately secured." Later it was provided that these loans need be only "reasonably" secured, while their maximum term was raised from five to ten years.

That business in good standing seldom encounters difficulty in obtaining needed funds is indicated by the fact that these facilities of the Federal Reserve Banks and the RFC have been employed to only a limited extent. Yet the Administration is still futilely seeking to find a remedy for deep-seated economic ills by providing cheap and easy financing. Apparently in response to the appeal made by the February conference of "small business" the President has appointed another official committee, with Secretary Morgenthau as chairman, to study plans for furnishing such financial aid.

Instead of spending time and energy in this endeavor the committee could do really constructive work by analyzing the excessive timidity which now causes businessmen to hesitate to borrow and makes investors extremely reluctant to lend. This attitude is fatal to sustained recovery. And so long as it exists private credit resources, however abundant, will not be available for use in the desired amounts.

What business needs is not more capital and credit at abnormally low rates but reliable assurance that the Administration will cease interposing obstacles to the successful functioning of the economic system. Cessation of endless and largely fruitless experimentation in this field would itself stimulate a flow of funds into both new and old enterprises. And it would do so much more quickly and effectively than any financing plan likely to be devised by the Government.

Mexico's Oil Dilemma.

Expropriation by the Cardenas government of American and British oil properties valued at over $400,000,000 has brought Mexico face to face with two far-from-pleasant alternatives—to let the industry go to ruin or to call in other foreigners to run it.

It is certain that the Mexican government will find it exceedingly difficult to operate the confiscated holdings efficiently, entirely aside from the unsolved problem of paying for them. A sharp increase in production costs, followed by a decline in production even below the reduced levels of recent years, can therefore be anticipated. In seizing the property of foreign oil firms because of their refusal to submit to what they deemed excessive wage boosts, the Mexican authorities have taken a step that may easily lead to destruction of the means of livelihood of thousands of workers.

The serious economic consequences of the expropriation move Mexico's chief executive has himself recognized. In his statement of March 18 he declared that if necessary Mexico will "sacrifice all constructive activities in which the nation has engaged during this administration to face the economic obligations that the application of the law of expropriation on such vast interests demands of us."

These are brave words. But they will not eliminate very well-founded skepticism regarding the execution of so heroic a program. Many believe that rather than permit a sharp decline in revenue and employment in the Mexican oil industry, the Cardenas government will make a deal with Germany, Italy or Japan, or a combination of those powers, to provide both markets and technical skill for the exploitation of its oil. Some assert that such arrangements were discussed before the expropriation order was issued and were an essential preliminary thereto.

It is true that Mexico's foreign policy has recently been one of rather frothy opposition to all dictatorships except that of Soviet Russia. The present Mexican government is often quick to make such easy gestures as its recent protest to the League on the German annexation of Austria. It has been lined up with the Barcelona government and has openly sent supplies to the Spanish republicans in their struggle with Gen. Franco and his Fascist allies. But all this may be forgotten if the present economic strain in Mexico intensifies.

President Cardenas is evidently aware of what many well-informed observers are thinking and saying. He has officially asserted that "our oil production will not be diverted at all from the moral solidarity maintained by our country with the nations of democratic principles. To these nations we wish to assure that the expropriation by decree is only to eliminate obstacles by groups that do not feel the evolutionary need of the people."

That is all good stump speaking for his own electorate. But it is in order to remind President Cardenas that arbitrary seizure of a foreign investment made in reliance on the good faith of the Mexican government is scarcely in accord with democratic principles. And it is further in order to note that on the heels of this "moral solidarity" discourse Tokyo dispatches report the negotiation of far-reaching Japanese-Mexican oil deals.

Abolition Decreed.

Defeat of the Byrd amendment providing for the continuance of the office of Comptroller General is equivalent to Senate approval of that section of the reorganization bill abolishing the General Accounting Office and vesting all the Comptroller's functions except that of post-audit in the Budget Bureau.

The debate on this subject was extraordinarily instructive, with speakers on both sides supporting their respective positions in very able fashion. There are unquestionably strong arguments both for and against the proposed changes, so that it is extremely difficult for the average individual to form an independent judgment about their desirability.

One thing at least is clear: the Comptroller General's office is not now functioning as effectively as it should. The deep resentment manifested toward that official by some of the executive agencies of the Government cannot be regarded as merely the outgrowth of a wish to escape from salutary financial restraint. The practice of removing from the Comptroller's supervision various government owned and controlled agencies is likewise significant. It is due in part at least, to a conviction that these organizations would be handicapped in the day-to-day conduct of business if their affairs were subjected to the routine of the Comptroller's office.

The Brownlow committee admitted that the authority exercised by the Comptroller General over departmental accounting had in many cases brought about improvements. However, the report stated that "these procedures have continually stressed the bringing of accounting information into the General Accounting Office, with little consideration for the informational needs of the Bureau of the Budget, of the Treasury Department, and ultimately of the President." "The tendency, therefore," they continued, "has been to deprive the Executive of adequate accounting machinery, or even authority to develop this important instrument of financial direction." This serious charge is used very effectively to support demands that determination of administrative accounting procedure, along with the control over expenditures—which are both executive functions—should be shifted to an executive official.

It serves little purpose, however, to emphasize the distinction between executive and other functions of the Comptroller as an argument in favor of the proposed separation of powers. Those who oppose any change in the character of the office are as a rule convinced that the Comptroller provides indispensable checks upon unauthorized executive expenditures. The case was presented very well by Senator Hale, who said that in establishing the present budget system, Congress—> made the very extreme sacrifice of turning over to the Executive the practical determination of the expenditures of the Federal Government. To balance its sacrifice it has given to its own officer, the Comptroller General, the head of the General Accounting Office, full regulatory power over these expenditures of the Government excepting in certain cases where that regulatory power has been specifically withheld by the Congress.

The transfer to an executive official of all the powers now exercised by the Comptroller but that of post audit might encourage some increase in irregular or dubiously legal expenditures. However, if the auditing of accounts were speeded up by the proposed independent General Auditing Office, Congress would have a very effective and often more immediate check upon the spending agencies. At present, indeed, prolonged delays in auditing of accounts occur which interfere with efficient administration.

Apparently fear of executive spending proclivities is one of the major reasons for opposition to any plan that would diminish the authority of the control agency established to supervise expenditures. To those who do not share these fears, which spring from a strong distrust of the executive branch of the Government, the abolition of the Comptroller's office does not necessarily spell the doom of responsible supervision of the Government's financial operations. Indeed, there is much to be said for such a change in theory. What will result in practice is another matter about which speculation would be rash. It is, however, matter for real regret that the Senate voted for a rather revolutionary change in the present system instead of being content with moderate reforms that would have corrected some admitted evils without weakening existing legislative checks upon executive spending.

Senator Byrd, who led the fight for retention of the Comptroller's office, conceded the need of providing for appeals from his decisions. Such checks are certainly essential to prevent the Comptroller General himself from becoming too much of a financial dictator. Moreover, the complaints of executive agencies charging that orders are issued without due regard for their needs and circumstances and counter-complaints of the Comptroller strongly suggest the need for fuller co-operation and consultation.

There has been too much emphasis heretofore upon the "watch-dog" activities of the Comptroller General and too little upon the importance of setting up adequate accounting machinery with the advice and co-operation of the departments concerned.

Half A Loaf For Blum.

When Premier Blum was defeated in the French Senate nine months ago on a question of finance, he and his cabinet resigned. This week the upper house of the French Parliament has again rebuffed him and, as before, on a financial issue. But this time the Socialist leader has apparently decided to accept the rebuff as gracefully as possible rather than, by resigning, leave France without a government at the present critical moment.

This is a credit to M. Blum's patriotism and his statesmanship. During the last two years he has revealed himself as anything but a doctrinaire leader. When it became evident that the cost of the social legislation put through under his auspices was outrunning the nation's capacity to absorb reforms, Blum called a halt. Similarly, on the Spanish problem, he has never permitted his deep personal sympathies for the republican regime to interfere with his support of non-intervention.

And, recently, when summoned by President Lebrun to form a new government following the resignation of the Chautemps cabinet, Blum sought with might and main to create a regime of national union by including, on the one hand, representatives of the Communists and, on the other, representatives of the conservative elements in the Chamber and Senate.

In this latter endeavor, which had the support of a very considerable body of public opinion of all shades, Blum was defeated by the Right. There are reasons to believe that its members prefer to keep France in a state of political turmoil rather than to take office under a Socialist premier with the Communists and Socialists participating in the government. And this narrow-minded view, destructive of the best interests of France, finds more recent reflection in the obstructive tactics of the Senate.

Not daring to reject outright Blum's demand for authority to increase the government's borrowing from the Bank of France by 9,000,000,000 francs, they reduced this figure by nearly half, accompanying this by a sharp personal attack on M. Blum and his supporters. Yet the Senate, by the very nature of its composition, is unrepresentative. The members are elected for nine-year terms by a system of indirect voting. The great majority of them, therefore, reflect not public opinion of today but the political climate of days gone by.

Now, as during last year's tiff with the upper house, M. Blum might have made a major issue of the Senate opposition. But since that would increase political tensions in the republic at a time when such a development might prove enormously dangerous, he has so far ignored the personal affront embodied in the Senate's action. A grudging half loaf, he concludes, is better than no bread for any skillful politician.

The Worm In The Apple.

You may, if you will, blame it on our climate, the wild extremes of which follow each other with bewildering speed. But, whatever the cause, we take our pleasures, as we take our business and our politics, violently. Proof of the fact may be found on any dance floor.

It was not always so. John Locke long ago pointed out that the effects of dancing are not confined to the body. Said he, "It gives to children not mere outward gracefulness of motion, but manly thoughts and a becoming confidence." And away back, Homer said of the dance that it is "the sweetest and most perfect of human enjoyments."

But they had never seen the Big Apple. And it was a later philosopher who glibly paraphrased Byron to read, "On with the dance. Let joy be unrefined."

That bit of mordant sarcasm is not more biting than the grave pronouncement of chiropodists in convention in Chicago: "Modern dancing is causing young persons to flock to foot doctors. It is causing (among other things) splay foot and enlargement of the ankles. If women must dance (the Big Apple and the like) let them dance barefoot or in golf shoes. It will be less graceful, but more healthful."

From which it would appear that an old saw will have to be revised: with a Big Apple a day there are doctors to pay. The not too light but wholly fantastic toe will on occasion get stubbed.

Charlie McCarthy has become the No. 1 attraction on the air and Snow White heads the current list of motion pictures in popularity. People are getting tired of people.

Suggests "Courtesy" Drivers.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since The Post is doing such fine work in the campaign toward safer driving I feel that my idea will fall into the correct hands through you.

On Sunday afternoons, from 1 o'clock on, the traffic flowing into the District on the main highways, i. e., Connecticut avenue, Wisconsin avenue, Rhode Island avenue, is extremely heavy. This means that numerous side streets with stop signs are dangerous and difficult to travel. At most of these there are no policemen or stop lights.

My suggestion is to inaugurate "courtesy drivers" who will patrol these main avenues and when he sees a car stranded on a side street unable to cross traffic, because of its density, he merely stop. This would hold back, only for a moment, the long line and enable the car on the side road to get through. By doing this little time is lost and a great number of accidents, by cars cutting into line, could be prevented.

A special tag could be attached to the car and two or three cars detailed to each avenue to patrol on Sunday afternoons. There are, no doubt, a good many people in Washington with cars at their disposal who would be willing, with gas and oil paid, plus a small wage per hour, to become "courtesy drivers." This would be economical and efficient for it is impossible to place policemen at every corner that is minus a light. BRUCE FESSENDEN.

Three-Year Plan.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: While I do not mean to suggest that the President and his associates had a plan, I do call attention to the fact that five long years have passed since he came into office. What do we find today? About $19,000,000,000 have been spent. The national debt is nearly doubled. Unemployment is about the same as it was five years ago. "The abundant life" is still "around the corner" and we still have "the forgotten man." As a matter of fact, Thomas Jefferson is the real "forgotten man." We simply can't laugh off these facts.

Nor can the New Deal proponents continue to cast reflections at Herbert Hoover. They have had five years, with money and co-operation from Congress and the American people, while he had but four years and very little co-operation. His record is beginning to take on a new brightness as compared to the last five years.

The sculptor said he had no ideas in mind which he meant to convey by the work which has been accepted for the front of the Apex Building. This piece of sculpture shows a man seeking to hold back a large horse that wants to go places. To me, the idea is quite clear. The name of the horse is "Recovery," and the man's name, "The New Deal." We now enter upon a three-year plan.

Austrians' Response.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Despite John W. Rankin's letter of March 22, I still doubt that Hitler's conquest of Austria was a happy occurrence. Granted, the German troops were greeted with cheers when they triumphantly goose-stepped into Austria, what else could the people do?

Those who did not greet the dawn of a new era by airing their tonsils with a razor blade doubtless thought it better to air their glands in cheering the advent of the local boy who made good in Germany.

Austrian foes of Hitler will be driven into exile and when he has rid the country of everyone who would use his brains to oppose him, Adolf will elevate those who know no better into choice Nazi jobs.

The United States And Mexico.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Something must be done about the Mexican situation. It has finally reached the turning point and there are too many dangerous possibilities.

The countries in the Western Hemisphere are about the only ones in the world that are not on the verge of a war. In order to retain sanity, they must remain friendly and work in co-operation. Mexico has been, and still is, going through the heart-breaking throes of a complete readjustment and the Mexican people still are groping. We are neighbors and should be friends; but, unfortunately, there seems to be almost a complete misunderstanding between us.

The Mexican people are suspicious and distrustful of us. That feeling is due, largely, to past events. It also is due, partly, to the conduct and actions of many of our people and companies in Mexico. A great many of our people who have gone into Mexico for business purposes or for pleasure have, by their inexcusably bad manners and conduct, frequently dishonest, aggravated the situation. Many of the companies, through their officers, have abused the privilege of operating in Mexico. They have frequently forgotten that, after all, Mexico belongs to the Mexicans.

In the current dispute with the oil companies there is undoubtedly much to be said for the position of the Mexican government. The oil companies haven't always been fair and their officials have made mistakes and blunders. There are always two sides to any question or dispute. However, expropriation is not the answer.

Granting that there should be some adjustment of the wage situation and that the Mexican government is sincere in its assurances that it will compensate the oil companies for the fair value of their properties, how could it raise the money at this difficult time? Bonds would seem to be out of the question because they would have no market value when other government bonds are in default. In addition to that, there are more than $200,000,000 in unsettled claims of our nationals against the Mexican government.

If the Mexican government and people should persist in driving out foreigners and foreign capital and our Government should be forced to stop the purchase of silver, there would be an immediate and complete financial and economic collapse in Mexico that would inevitably result in political upsets and bloodshed. No country can possibly exist and survive in, of and by itself. It is absolutely essential that all of the countries in North and South America remain friendly to one another.

President Roosevelt, Secretary Hull and Undersecretary Welles have been and are doing all in their power to create good will and confidence between Mexico, the other Latin-American countries and ourselves, and to build up trade relations on a mutually advantageous basis, as the only real way to preserve friendly relations. Surely President Cardenas and his advisers appreciate the sincerity and friendliness of this Administration, and realizing the gravity of the present situation will be willing to co-operate in seeking a solution that will be just, fair and acceptable to all concerned. The oil companies should co-operate and act in harmony with the State Department.

A compromise could and should be arrived at by using tact, common sense and good will.

"Let Business Alone."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The fact that banks and other money lenders are overburdened with funds, and business dull, is evidence that those who have money know not what to do with it. They will not spend or invest without some assurance of a return in the way of dividends or employment. Hence the present stagnation in circulation of the surpluses.

Fifty years ago the only field for speculation was real estate. Brokers made more on commission than they knew what to do with. We would sell a lot one day and buy it back the next at an increase in the price. When we thought the city limits had been oversold we went to the suburbs and paid prices for land then that we could not get more for now. I bought a tract at $2,000 per acre in 1893, at the time of the panic, and still have it.

Investments have since turned to industries and the same fate that overtook the real estate boom has taken place with the industrial boom. Now, what is the trouble? Let business, which has plenty of competition, alone. They will not function without a profit from which they can pay dividends that will stimulate investments and the circulation of surpluses horded in banks.

Experience has taught us to investigate before we invest.

Joseph's Way.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems fair to assume that Secretary Wallace means the Joseph of Genesis when he refers to himself as the Joseph of American farmers.

Just what did Joseph do to the Egyptian farmers? Even a casual reading of the Forty-seventh Chapter of Genesis will give a clear answer. Joseph first took from them all their money, then their corn, then their cattle and finally their land.

"And we and our land will be servants unto Pharaoh," exactly as has already happened in Russia and has been planned for the United States by our Pharaoh and Joseph. "And Pharaoh said unto Joseph, I am Pharaoh, and without thee shall no man lift up his hand or foot in all the land of Egypt." Our Pharaoh has added the codicil "nor plant, dig or sell a potato without my permission." E. V. WILCOX.

Doctor Of Chiropractic.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post of March 23 refers to Mr. Harold V. Giese. Dr. Giese was a graduate of the Palmer College, a leading chiropractic college having the legal right to confer the doctor of chiropractic degree on graduates, has the perfect right to use that title. The Congress has legalized chiropractic in the District, and chiropractors have the same right to use the term "doctor" as do dentists, physicians, osteopaths, ministers of divinity, etc.

Dr. Giese was graduated in medicine from the Sweden University, and was on the medical staff at Walter Reed Hospital before taking up the study and subsequent practice of chiropractic.

The Post Impressionist

"I Know What I Like."

"I DON'T know much about art, but I know what I like," quotes the painter, and laughs.

People with his attitude make me sick. Does the painter's lack of knowledge of the chemistry of foods prevent his knowing that he likes a T-bone steak? Because he's never been midwife to a ewe or carded wool or tangled with a tissue-paper pattern does he feel himself less able to appreciate a good suit of homespun? Is he bashful about declaring in company that he likes a sunny day or a cloudy day because he knows less of the science of aerology than the Weather Bureau? Not so it can be noticed.

And why does he like things anyway? Isn't it partly because something in his own nature is attracted to them, and partly because they conform to a standard which he accepts? The vital consideration, however, seems to be not that a thing conforms to a standard but that it suits the liking of the individual.

When "Pilgrim's Progress" was published its success among the middle and lower class people of nonconformist views was tremendous. In pious Scotland it had even more of an immediate popularity than in England. But among the educated and Cavalier class in general it was either unknown or mentioned with scorn. Its allegorical moralizings were at odds with the life and likings of the upper class. Not until a century after Bunyan's death did it acquire a position of eminence in public regard. In fact, Lord Macaulay said, "The Pilgrim's Progress" is perhaps the only book about which the educated minority has come over to the opinion of the common people."

But Macaulay died in 1859. Tastes have changed again, and with them the public interest in Christian and his woes. Oh, the book has its place in the college English curriculum (though many recent graduates majoring in English have never peeked inside its covers), but who voluntarily reads it? It rose to favor not on its intrinsic merit as a powerful allegory—though it established the standard for such works—but because it suited the rising tide of religious moralistic feeling, and it has subsided from favor as that tide has swept into other channels.

Thus we come back, by way of Robinson's barn, to the factor of "liking." In painting, some people like Maxfield Parrish and some like Rockwell Kent and some like John Marin. But the people who like Parrish, though large in numbers, are not apt to be very articulate about his work. And the people who like John Marin, though articulate enough, are not large in numbers. However, the people who like Rockwell Kent are numerous enough and articulate enough to give him a present-day acceptance by the general public as an artist of quality.

Whether the reputation of Parrish or Marin or Kent, or all of them, will survive in succeeding generations beyond the eclectic few depends on how well they fit the tastes of the succeeding generations. If this is such a self-evident fact how can the practitioners of any art laugh when the layman says, "I don't know much about art, but I know what I like?" Liking is the most powerful and most terrible weapon which the future holds over the artist, and is not to be treated with mirth or scorn. A man had as soon laugh at the hurricane that races over the fields to destroy him as to ridicule the sword of future tastes.

El Greco, who painted in the late sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, was sufficiently popular in his own time to cause sonnets to be written in his honor. From that height he passed into an obscurity from which he has recently emerged to receive the ancestor-worship of modern artists. Yet his work was as "good" during his eclipse as it was during his lifetime or is now. If the layman during the period of El Greco's dark ages had known the art canons of that day he still would not have known the man whom contemporary artists hail as a master. But if he were just one of the dumb herd who knew what he liked, and had seen El Greco's paintings, he might have liked them—because he wouldn't have known any better!

And since there is no absolute knowledge of what is "good," any work of art (that is, any thing artificially contrived) having the property of appearing both good and bad to its creator and its critics, the only criterion remaining is that of taste, of liking. No artist can survive if someone does not like his work. When no such person exists the artist, as an artist, is dead—no matter how high he kick his heels. And when such a person exists the artist lives again, however many years he may have been sown in mortality. A craftsman's dream of immortality lies not only in his work but in the whim of the very creatures at whom he laughs, who don't know much about art, but know what they like.

This company of the unknowing-but-confident is large—and who can quibble at their confidence? Didn't Tom Brown give their attitude authority 200 years ago when he restated Martial's epigram into the comforting:

I do not love thee, Doctor Fell
The reason why I cannot tell,
But this alone I know full well,
I do not love thee, Doctor Fell.

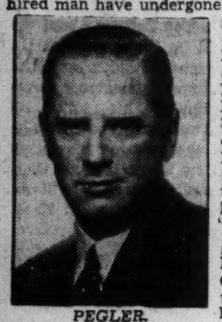
HOPE of banding the farmer and the wage-earning laborer together for political unity in this part of the country must yield to the fact that the farmer and the hired man have undergone a change. The Si Perkins model of farmer and Ole, the hired man, might have had some mutual interest at one time, but Si Perkins long ago became a "soulless corporation," with a board of directors in a big city, possibly Chicago or New York, and Ole is joining the hayshakers' union to fight for overtime and his Sundays off.



PEGLER.

They are no more congenial than Mr. Tom Girdler and the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee, and the idea of their joining hands for mutual advantage is grimly humorous.

The farm is known nowadays as a farm-factory. It is organized, economized and mechanized and owned by or allied to big business, and great corporation canneries adjoin the groves and fields, which are operated in units of from 1,000 to 10,000 acres. An organization of small farmers and industrial and agricultural labor has estimated that California's largest bank, the Bank of America, farmed 500,000 acres in 1936. Other corporate farmers, not exactly hicks, include the California Packing Co. and Libby, McNeill & Libby.

The same brief sets forth that the great farming interests control one-fourth of the total productive acreage all embraced in a mere 2 per cent of the total number of California farms, and that by connivance of State officials many urban relief recipients are dumped on the countryside so that they may be available to the farming companies in times of urgent need at distress wages.

THE CONDITION of the migratory sod-buster and picker who tin-cans it from crop to crop, following the seasons, has not been adequately dramatized, although John Steinbeck gave a glimpse in his story "Of Mice and Men," and may yet spit on his hands and become the Charles Dickens of the California country slums.

These people are mostly Americans of old physically and economically impoverished stock and it is no longer possible to shrug off the plight of the picker on the ground that he and his family are Mexicans or Orientals and therefore ineligible for honest American sympathy.

The Associated Farmers of California, an organization of big and little farm owners and operators, has threatened to boycott San Francisco and shop elsewhere for the members' machinery and all such tackle as farmers buy in cities if the businessmen and labor leaders cannot put an end to the incessant union fights over jurisdiction and dues, which have made San Francisco an unreliable shipping point. These unions, however, both A. F. of L. and C. I. O., are so blind from rage and blood pressure that the union dictators are in a mood to tear the town apart rather than yield anything to each other. Union leaders hate other union leaders much worse than they hate employers.

The Associated Farmers threaten not only to buy elsewhere but to ship through some other port, presumably Los Angeles, and while they were on the subject of obstreperous unions in the city they made the point that they could not permit the establishment of the closed shop or the union hiring hall in their own business. They include many small-patch operators who think their interests are identical with those of the big corporations.

• • • •

THIS ORGANIZATION has been accused of fascism and has denied the foul aspersion, but one of the embattled big-time farmers recently revealed a plan which bespeaks the ribald mirth of the castor oil committees of Mussolini's early days. He said that in any future fracases with the unioneers in the peaceful countryside he intended to shell them in the pants with his shotgun because Communists like to have news pictures taken for propaganda purposes showing small punctures in the chest, whereas not even a Communist can take in scars of the class conflict worn on his stern.

Complicating all this, Dave Beck, the tough guy of the teamster's union, has been issuing regulations as to who may and may not drive a truck over the public roads of California, with a specially hard glare in his eye for the small farmer who likes to combine a trip to market with a job of non-union commercial hauling on the return journey. Thus the smallies, too, are finding reasons to resent and resist labor organizations, and the proposition, "Resolved that the pitchfork is mightier than the wagon spoke," may yet be argued at intimate quarters on the poppy fields of the Golden State.

The Once Over

Insurance At The Bank.

("New York savings banks are now allowed to sell life insurance."—News item.)

Bank Doorman—Good morning. How are you today?

(The customer enters bank.)

An Attendant—Can I help you, sir?

Customer—Er, yes. I'm a little confused in here.

Attendant—That's nothing; I've worked here 15 years and I'm still at sea myself. Do you want to put in or take out?

Customer—It's something rather in between . . . I want some insurance. Who do I see?

Attendant—The agent is at window 15.

Customer—There seems to be a big line there.

Attendant—Yes, it moves pretty slow.

Customer—I suppose the depositors don't know what it's all about.

Attendant—They seem to understand it fairly well, but the bank can't seem to get the hang of it yet.

Customer (to man ahead in line)—This line certainly seems stationary.

Man Ahead—It just moved an inch. I guess the teller in the window must have finally understood something.

Customer—What do you think of this idea of insuring yourself at a bank, anyhow?

Man Ahead—The part I like is that they don't try to sell you more than you came in for and no agent puts you to sleep with a long speech on double indemnity, where you will be at 65 and the big policy he just sold one of the Rockefellers.

Man Ahead—No, I just came in for the novelty.

Customer—What novelty?

Man Ahead—The novelty of not being argued with by an insurance agent.

Customer (finally reaching the window)—Good morning.

Man at Window—Now, that takes care of it and you are insured with us for $1,000.

Customer—I only just reached the window. We haven't even been over the details.

Man at Window—My mistake . . . It's all so new to me I get all muddled up. Now, then, where's your deposit?

Customer—My deposit?

Man at Window—I'm sorry . . . I thought I was back at my regular window.

Customer (beginning to get a little balled up, too)—I guess I'll draw out about $35.

Man at Window—But, as I was just explaining, this is the insurance line.

Customer—So it is! I'm getting all mixed up myself.

Man at Window—Understand? Your heart is okay, so it is indorsed by the bank examiner, and we hold your liver at 3 per cent compound interest. In 15 years you double your original investment and can draw out your basic metabolism any time.

Customer—That's even if I lose the book and the hearing in one ear, exclusive of any accident on common carriers and asthma?

Man at Window—Who?

Blum's Handicap

French Right's Balk At Communists In Cabinet In Face Of Darkening European Scene Spelled Premier's Doom.

By Jacques Kayser.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

Paris.

THE MOST RECENT French cabinet crisis developed without surprising anybody. It was expected. In my previous letters I have shown why and how the Chautemps government, despite the large majorities which it had obtained, was a weak cabinet. One young deputy put it this way: "The greater the government's majorities, the shorter its life." He was right.

But when, on the morning of March 10, Chautemps announced the resignation of his government, no one doubted that this development would have serious international repercussions. Even members of the government themselves agreed.

It was known that the international situation had definitely been worsened as a result of the Berchtesgaden interview. It was admitted that Austria would become the theater of events of the first magnitude. But that was precisely one of the reasons why Chautemps decided to quit, while indicating his desire to have his government replaced by one of broader dimensions. However, nobody expected that predictions for central Europe would materialize with such lightning-like rapidity.

It was a veritable thunderclap when, on the following morning, the news arrived that German troops were massed along the Austrian frontier and that Chancellor Schuschnigg, for his part, had called out the reservists. The full seriousness of the situation was then realized and for more than a day politics were forgotten, everyone thinking of the defense and the dignity of the nation.

Personal And National Elements In Resignation.

BUT BEFORE outlining the political crisis which had such a tragic character, in view of international circumstances, it is necessary, first of all, to go over briefly the reasons why the Chautemps government handed in its resignation.

These reasons were of two different kinds—personal and national.

M. Chautemps decided that he could no longer continue to direct a feeble cabinet always obliged to maneuver under great difficulties to achieve a majority in Parliament. He was unwilling to continue exercising power under such circumstances. And Yvon Delbos, his minister of foreign affairs, had wanted to hand in his resignation at the time Anthony Eden had left the British government. For his part, M. Marchandeau, the minister of finance, in the face of the increasingly difficult situation facing his department, spoke a similar language. Under these conditions, the government's sands began to run out.

Actually, the resignation came at a moment when, for national reasons, it was found necessary to make a great appeal for economy.

In order to pay for increasing military expenditures, as well as a needed expansion of the fleet, air force, etc., the government had decided to create a special war chest, separated from the rest of the budget and rigorously controlled so that all the sums earmarked for defense purposes would be spent for those purposes.

The premier deemed the man best qualified for the post of supervisor of this fund to be Marshal Petain. Would this esteemed hero have turned down the job had it been offered him? No one knows. Chautemps decided that the time was not politically ripe to launch a comprehensive program, that what was first needed was a restoration of confidence through the creation of a truly national government. And to make that possible, it was necessary to get rid of the old regime. This Chautemps understood. And, in line with political practices, he presented himself before the Chamber and made a moving appeal in which, in particular, he invoked the need of just such a government of union of all Frenchmen, after which he resigned.

Events Called For Speedy Reorganization.

THIS WAS March 10, in the morning. The international situation, the financial difficulties, clearly called for a speedy solution of the political crisis. Everybody thought it would be over in less than a day. But, unfortunately, it was not until Sunday afternoon, March 13, that this happened. And during these four days, during which France was without a government, Europe was shaken to its very foundations by the German annexation of Austria and by the collapse of the heroic armies of republican Spain.

Why did the crisis, in appearance so simple to solve, last as long as it did? The reason is that it proved impossible to liquidate as rapidly as the situation demanded existing political differences and conflicting attitudes in France.

As is customary, the President of the republic entrusted the task of forming a new government to the leader of the largest party, namely, Leon Blum, of the Socialists. At first Blum hoped to create a regime in the image of the Popular Front, that is to limit it to Socialists, Radical Socialists and Communists. But the Radicals hesitated; they did not want to collaborate with the Communists; so, before responding to Blum's suggestion, they asked him first to state the program which the new regime would follow.

The negotiations between Daladier, the Radical chief, and Blum lasted all of March 11, during the course of which there occurred in central Europe the concentration of German troops on the Austrian frontier, Hitler's ultimatum to Schuschnigg, the latter's resignation and the final and sweeping victory of the Nazis.

Outside of political circles in France, the watchword everywhere was "union." The union of all Frenchmen was urged as the answer to the new coup de force of the Germans. Then Blum made it known that he was entirely willing, in the face of the perilous external situation, to constitute a broadgaged government from the Communists on the left to the most diehard conservatives on the right—that is, from Thorez to Louis Marin. Unfortunately, Blum felt compelled to insist that preliminary to this a Socialist congress be summoned to approve the idea. This meeting was to be called the following morning. This was Blum's downfall.

Direct Action Could Have Saved Situation.

IF HE HAD taken, on his own initative and with proper decisiveness, the bull by the horns in this matter of forming a government of national union, the catastrophic Austrian events would in all likelihood have enabled him to succeed in forming a national government. The following day was too late.

Thus, in a few hours, the working class and all the parties of the Left broke with a long tradition, interrupted only by the war, and agreed to a cabinet of union, of reconciliation. But at this point it was the men and the parties which had always preached union and reconciliation—the men and the parties of the Right, the representatives of the bourgeoisie—who refused. They did not want to serve under Leon Blum. They did not want to collaborate with the Communists.

At this point the demand might have been made that this broadbased government should be headed by a man of the Left less radical than Blum, by, say, Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber, or Edouard Daladier, minister of defense. But the President of the republic did not feel he ought to intervene by revoking the mandate he had given Blum to form a government and turning the job over to one more likely to succeed. The silence and passivity of the chief of state made a deep but by no means favorable impression on many observers. For perhaps the first time Lebrun was the direct object of criticism.

It was under these circumstances that Blum finally managed to assemble a cabinet which in composition was similar to the one he had formed in June, 1936, a Socialist and Radical government supported by the Communists.

The new regime met with a cold reception from French public opinion which had hoped for and had anticipated a government of national union. Nor did Blum expect that it would enjoy a particularly long life. He formed his new government because, as he said, France could not stand any further delay without a cabinet; but just as soon as a national union regime becomes possible, he made it clear, his government will stand aside.

Thus while Hitler took at most two days to conquer Austria, France took twice that long to resolve, and with indifferent success, a simple ministerial crisis.

In any case, the second Blum government has had to face, since the very beginning an extraordinarily difficult international and fiscal situation, a situation which in the opinion of practically all Frenchmen can only be met adequately by the formation of a government of national union. The mark of death has thus been branded on the second Blum regime the very moment it came to life.

British Stand

By Barnet Nover.

Neville Chamberlain Explains.

DURING THE PAST month Premier Chamberlain has thrice addressed the House of Commons on international affairs. Every one of these speeches was of and by itself a pronouncement of major importance. Considered together and in sequence, however, they are more enlightening still.

They reveal not only the hesitations and uncertainties which for so long have marked British policy and which, in considerable measure, continue to characterize it but also how that policy is being modified and clarified under the impact of the developing European crisis. And that is probably why, despite Mr. Chamberlain's negative approach to the key problems of Czechoslovakia and Spain, his latest address has met with a fairly good reception both in Paris and Prague.

The conclusions which the British premier is very loath to draw regarding the trend of European affairs and Great Britain's relations thereto, the French and Czech statesmen are drawing for him—and for themselves.

• • • •

THE FIRST of the three speeches in question was made by Mr. Chamberlain on February 21, on the occasion of his debate with Anthony Eden, following the latter's resignation as foreign secretary.

On this occasion the British premier indulged in no small measure of wishful thinking.

"I cannot believe," he then said, "that with a little good will and determination it is not possible to remove genuine grievances and clear away suspicions." He went on to urge negotiations with Germany and with Italy to clear away those grievances and suspicions standing in the way of good relations between Britain and the Fascist powers.

With regard to the Italian problem Mr. Chamberlain at that time stressed the importance of a solution of the Spanish question and declared that it was axiomatic that during the conversations between the London and Rome governments Italy would demonstrate her good faith by abstaining from sending fresh reinforcements to Gen. Franco and by implementing the arrangements (i.e., withdrawal of volunteers) contemplated by the British formula.

In this speech, though it followed the Berchtesgaden meeting of Hitler and Schuschnigg by nine days and Hitler's Reichstag speech with its claim of a protectorate over the 10,000,000 Germans along the Third Reich's borders, not a word was said of Austria or Czechoslovakia. On the contrary, Mr. Chamberlain viewed the European situation with rose-tinted glasses. "If," he said, "we can bring these four nations (Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany) into friendly discussions and into a settling of their differences, we shall have saved the peace of Europe for a generation."

• • • •

BY MARCH 15, when Chamberlain found it necessary to give the House of Commons a new accounting of British policy, his earlier optimism had vanished completely. Hitler's sudden coup with regard to Austria had removed the scales from the British premier's eyes. His speech was an essay in lamentation over Germany's browbeating tactics and Hitler's tendency to regard Great Britain as a cipher in central European affairs.

"What has passed," said Chamberlain, "cannot fail to prejudice the hope of His Majesty's government of removing the misunderstandings between nations and promoting international co-operation."

But precisely how Great Britain intended to adjust her policy to meet the revolutionary changes in the European situation brought about by the disappearance of Austria, Chamberlain did not say. The heavens might fall, but the London cabinet would not be rushed into making any commitments.

In the meantime the vast additional assistance sent to Franco from Germany and Italy was bringing about a profound modification of the balance of forces in Spain. Once again the republican government was being forced to fight with its back against the wall and once again Mussolini's pledges had proved a very weak reed to lean on. On this subject Chamberlain kept silent.

• • • •

ON THURSDAY the British premier spoke again. His speech was the most precise of the three he had made since February 21. This time he outlined the present nature of Britain's policy of limited liability. Great Britain, said Chamberlain, would live up with all the force at her command to the pledges of support given France, Belgium, Egypt, Irak and Portugal. No similar pledge could be given beleaguered Czechoslovakia. "Where peace or war is concerned legal obligations are not alone involved and if war broke out it likely would not be confined to those who have assumed such obligations."

That while the British leader made a negative motion with his right hand he made a positive one with his left.

NOW IT IS something that Great Britain even considers central Europe a zone of secondary interest and at last admits, if by indirection, that war in a region "where her vital interests are not concerned, may nevertheless drag her in."

It is this fact which explains French and Czechoslovak satisfaction with the latest Chamberlain pronouncement. The statesmen in Prague and Paris can see the inevitable effect of Great Britain's commitment to France should that nation be involved in a war on Czechoslovakia's behalf. But the London government is not yet prepared to implement that logic in any pledge to the beleaguered central European republic even as in 1914 Great Britain was outwardly disinterested in Serbia's fate until Serbia's fate inextricably involved first Russia and then France and thus Britain.

Of course it doesn't make sense any more than British aloofness to present developments in Spain, where Britain's partner, France, may have to face a third Fascist nation on its flank, makes sense. But it is nonetheless a measure of belated progress in British governmental thinking on foreign affairs that even while the pronouncement is made that there must be no anticipation of events, a British premier has begun to lift a little corner of the future and to suggest, if in veiled and round-about language, what Britain's attitude will then be.

Nazi Women

By Frieda Wunderlich.

Short Dream Of Freedom.

THE REVOLUTION of 1918 broke the German woman's last chains. It gave her the vote. The Weimar constitution prescribed identical civil rights and duties for men and women.

It was a short dream. Resentment against equal rights for women reappeared in the last depression. The attack against women's work increased with mounting election returns for National Socialists, who proclaimed man's exclusive right to the professions and to public life and revived the old idea of man's dominance and woman's inferiority. The National Socialist revolution of 1933 was the turning point.

• • • •

THE PHILOSOPHY that reshapes Germany today is a religion of war. Woman's chief, if not her only, task is to bear those strong men the Fatherland needs for its wars.

The removal of women from political life has been ruthless. Wherever they held high office, they have been replaced by men. They have disappeared from responsible positions in ministries, they have lost office as aldermen in municipalities, but they have continued as typists and stenographers. The ousting of women from the teaching and other professions is primarily achieved by barring them from training.

Wherever women compete with men, married men and members of military organizations are given preference—in fact, regardless of fitness for the position, men are given preference. The type of work suitable for women is determined, not by free competition, but by the arbitrary decision of men. In a country with a female surplus of more than 1,800,000, women are supposed to have husbands who support them.

• • • •

The future toward which German youth moves marching and singing and filled with hope gives little opportunity to the girl. Drudgery is her fate. She returns to her old sphere, to the family, but this old sphere has changed. The family is no longer the high social unit it was 100 years ago. Women go back to a family which has been deprived of many of its most important functions by the industrial revolution, by urbanization and by the totalitarian state.

WPA Studying Charges of Job Trade for Votes

Labor Nonpartisan League Levels Accusation at Pendergast Men.

By the Associated Press.

Charges that lieutenants of the Pendergast political organization in Kansas City had intimidated relief workers caused the Works Progress Administration to order an investigation yesterday.

Officials said, however, they were inclined to "discount" the charges, made by members of Labor's Non-Partisan League. The league members alleged that the "Democratic machine"—headed by Tom Pendergast—was attempting to coerce WPA forces into voting for its candidates in the forthcoming city election. The league is linked with coalitionists against Pendergast in the campaign.

Charges Minimized.

Officials here said the complaints appeared to be "about the usual run of stock-in-trade political charges." Nevertheless, they added, the WPA did not intend to overlook them.

Aubrey Williams, acting WPA administrator, placed the investigation in the hands of Howard O. Hunter, of Chicago, assistant administrator in charge of the Midwestern region.

Williams said he had no substantial evidence that workers had been intimidated. He said there were two or three letters from league members which alleged that a WPA foreman and a timekeeper had approached subordinates and intimated that unless they voted "Democratic" they might lose their jobs.

Job Quota Unfilled.

Complaints began reaching Williams about a week ago, it was said. One was that WPA jobs were being exchanged for Democratic votes.

WPA officials said, however, that records showed work relief rolls were not increasing in Kansas City as rapidly as in other cities.

"The Kansas City March quota has not been filled," they declared.

$12,000 Raised So Far in Police Boys Club Drive

Campaign workers in the drive to secure $75,000 for the Boys Club of the Metropolitan Police reported contributions totaling more than $12,000 at a luncheon at the Willard Hotel yesterday. James E. Colliflower, president, presided.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Episcopal Bishop of Washington, called for greater concentration on local citizens to "go over ton top" by April 9. He said:

"If we adopt the principle of preventing crime among our boys while they are boys, we have gone a long way toward eliminating further building of penal institutions to accommodate them when they have become grown men."

William H. Stivers, of Congress Heights, was sentenced to 30 days in jail on charge of intoxication and $300 bond for vagrancy in Police Court yesterday, after he made an effort to place Judge Edward M. Curran's clerk, Charles Driscoll, in the role of character witness.

Stivers told Judge Curran Driscoll knew him. Driscoll admitted knowing the defendant. He said he had seen Stivers a few days before, soliciting alms in front of Police Court.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Ambition and Ruling.

Not to be forgotten is the practice in some Federal departments of ruling out of employment those who aspire to positions which require training in the law but who are not educated in so called "accredited" schools. About two months ago, the issue flared up when such a policy in the Agricultural Department was brought to light. Then the commotion died down, outwardly—but it hasn't slept. S. 3549 proves it.

The bill, introduced by Senator Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, contemplates one thing: the protection of those who, being compelled to work by day, still have enough courage to study by night as a means of getting ahead in this already hard-enough world. Had Abraham Lincoln—to point out one case—lacked such a will and had he not been encouraged in it in his time, the country would certainly have been without his services.

The Sheppard bill says, in essence: That in appointing, or fixing requirements with respect to the appointment of persons to any positions in the Government service, if the qualifications required of applicants for such positions include legal training or legal experience, no officer or employe of any executive department, independent establishment, or agency (including Government-owned, Government-controlled corporations) of the U. S. shall discriminate against any applicant, or deny to any applicant the privilege of taking any competitive examination held for the purpose of determining the qualifications of applicants for such positions, because such applicant (1) has not been graduated from a particular law school; (2) has not been graduated from a law school which is of a particular class or which has been approved or accredited by any association, organization or group; or (3) has not had college training in addition to law school training." Section two of the bill provides enough biting teeth:

"Sec. 2. No sum appropriated or allocated for the payment of salaries and expense accounts of officers and employes of the executive departments . . . shall be available to pay the salary or expense accounts of any such officers or employes who violates the first section of this act."

And this bill, if enacted, would correct a situation that thousands have groaned over.

Comes tidings that Col. Richard G. Wooton, one-time chief of systems and audits and chief of Federal Reserve Bank Audits, PWA, is now down in Mississippi, tramping the swales and hillsides in an effort to become Congressman from the Sixth District . . . Down there he has had considerable experience in public life, having managed the gubernatorial campaign in 1927, a Senatorial campaign in the following year and with the boast that he himself has never, before this time, sought public office . . . Back here he is a member of the U. S. Supreme Court and the District bars . . . The gentleman who brought us the information left the notation: "In his home town, Hattiesburg, Miss., he has a host of friends among the railroad men and other workers and his hearty sympathy for unionism is borne out by his membership in the American Federation of Government Employes." . . .

The benefits and disadvantages of the reciprocal trade agreement this Government is making with other nations will be discussed in a forum to be conducted by the Farm Credit Club at 7:45 o'clock Thursday evening in room 358 of the FCA Building. The discussion leaders will be L. R. Edminston, chief economist, Trade Agreements Division, State Department. A panel representing manufacturing, agricultural, labor and consumer viewpoints is being arranged. The sponsors feel that the subject should be of considerable interest at this time, in view of the pending negotiations for a British agreement and the possible implications that this and other agreements may have with regard to international relations in the future. The meeting is open to FCA employes and their friends, who may participate in the discussions.

Wheeler Charges Railroads Masked Their Propaganda

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, asserted yesterday that a group of railroads "secretly" issued propaganda through an "apparently independent educational foundation."

The Montanan, presiding at hearings of the Senate Railroad Committee, cited activities of the Fuel-Power-Transportation Educational Fundation, organized in 1927 by the Ohio State Chamber of Commerce.

Samuel S. Wyern, consulting engineer from Columbus, Ohio, told of preparing special studies for use in Ohio and other schools under the name of the foundation. He denied the work was "propaganda."

Treasury Has 'Surplus' Despite Budget Deficit

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Treasury yesterday ran into the anomaly of a $14,821,337 cash surplus and a simultaneous budget deficit of $809,645,890. The situation arose because of temporary reduction of the budget deficit by heavy March income tax collections, but a substantial difference between cash and budgetary accounts always exists because of Treasury bookkeeping methods.

John Chester gathered the tiny congregation together and served as pastor for 30 years. The early meetings of the group were held in the House wing of the Capitol, where the sacraments of the Lord's Supper and baptism were observed.

In 1865 a small chapel was erected on the present location, Fourth and B streets southeast. The building now is use was constructed in 1868, the year the church changed its name from Capitol Hill to Metropolitan.

Charity 'Most Heroic Passion'

By the Rev. J. J. Queally,
Rector, Transfiguration Church.

"Though I speak with the tongue of men and of Angels and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinking cymbal." The man who wrote this was neither a sentimentalist nor a fanatic. He was a wise statesman, once a soldier and a persecutor. He wrote it in a time of war and great persecution and as a prisoner in his dungeon in the presence of soldiers, swords and armor. This is the reason I have the courage to refer to that most sublime canticle on chairty written by Saint Paul in his first Epistle to the Corinthians, Chapter 13. It was written in times like today when the very word sounds like idle mockery.

What that quality has done for civilization no man can doubt. Without it there could be no real progress nor happiness in life and in fact without it life itself would be very meaningless. This virtue is extolled from pulpit, pew, platform and rostrum. There is no assembly where human beings meet but charity is directly or indirectly praised. It does not seem to be the prerogative of any particular form of religion or class. Saint Paul seems to imply it is above all. "Thought I have propbecy, all knowledge and all faith and have not charity, I am nothing." It is, so to speak, the commander-in-chief of all religious forces. Self denial and alms giving are not even enough because he repeats they are nothing without charity. It certainly persupposes a love of God as the rationale for love of our neighbor and it is especially a Christian heritage and a development of Christianity itself. Its whole essence is in our personal interest in our fellowmen. We do know that it has been that quality of character in the noblest men and women who have done anything of lasting good for humanity.

"You would never reach the first base" said a man to me, "if you relied on this quality." I feel the answer came from one who had only a partial but prevalent idea of its meaning. It is not condescending pity nor vague altruism nor mere kindly sentiment. It it mutual aid with a divine motive. It is the most heroic passion for justice in the human heart. It is in a word, Christ and all He ever taught, in action.

It has played a great part in the history of this country. It seems to be at the root of democracy and men have died for it. The Civil War arose to end the defense of slavery. The World War to eliminate the idea that any nation for the benefit of its own race could dominate the world. At the basis of these philosophies was the great law of charity. If we glance back across the years and mark the powers that brought us nearest to our hopes of an ideal world, surely this quality will be found as the foremost. The poor butchered victims of the vast struggle now going on, and some of us who look on, may find it hard to believe in its power. It was so at Calvary, yet, the greatest soldier and the greatest sufferer that ever lived, died with the words upon His sacred lips and the hopes of its success in His pierced heart.

"Sounding brass or tinkling cymbal!" O, the withering scorn of those words today! "Sounding brass or tinkling cymbal!" Childish toys, against undeclared war, murder, persecution and the violation of every Christian ideal.

Our boasted knowledge, our political prophecies, our eloquent tongues, seem to have failed. Now will Saint Paul's words come true that "Charity never faileth" and arouse Christendom from "childish things" to united manhood and action, or will "the choice go by forever twixt that darkness and that light"?

"O, Lord give not thine heritage to reproach that the heathen should rule over them: wherefore should they say among the people, where is their God?"

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Widower Tells Sweetheart His Friends Think Her Unsuited to Him; Can She Persuade Him Otherwise?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Several months ago I began going with a widower who has four children, ranging in ages from 8 to 19 years. We became very fond of each other and had planned a future together. During our stay together we have always enjoyed the company of each other very much and there was never the slightest misunderstanding or friction. He lives approximately 300 miles from here in my home county.

* * * *

In February I was home on a visit and everything was fine. Then, on my return, I received two letters from him which I could not understand. In desperation, I finally went out to see him; but not until five minutes before train time could I learn what the trouble was. It seems that one or several of his friends had advised him that I am not the type of woman to be his wife; that I would not settle down; and that I would cause unhappiness between him and his children. All this had greatly disturbed him.

* * * *

I am 36 years old. ive dealt with the public ever since I have been grown, taught school for ten years and have always been able to get along well with people. I should like to know just what I can do to ease his mind and prove to him that we can make a go of marriage. I love him dearly and am sure we will both regret it as long as we live if we permit others to interfere. But there seems to be so little I can do at this distance and in view of the fact that we don't see each other oftener than every three months.

* * * *

Would you advise another visit back home at Easter time, for the purpose of having a good talk and seeing if a definite understanding can be arranged? Please advise me, for I am much perplexed and feel that my whole future is at stake. Until two weeks ago, I felt I had more to live for than I had had for 14 years. PERPLEXED.

* * * *

What to Believe.

DEAR PERPLEXED: I doubt that this widower is being altogether truthful in holding his friends responsible for his wish to ease himself out of whatever matrimonial promises he has made to you. I consider it more likely that his children raised a protest, or that he himself decided, as the acquaintanceship progressed, that you are too radically different from his late wife to fill the place she occupied in his heart and social life.

* * * *

I am inclined to believe he took his misgivings to certain of his friends and solicited their opinions pro and con, rather than that they took it upon themselves to warn him against you. The average individual whose opinion carries weight carefully refrains from unsolicited interference in his friends' private lives. Moreover, if this man really cared for you and had sound reasons for believing you would be a good wife and a good stepmother to his children, he would marry you in spite of the objections of busybodies.

* * * *

I believe you would be humbling yourself to no purpose in arguing against his apparent decision to outlaw the possibility of marriage. Pride and self-respect should prohibit your going back to him at Easter time to plead your case. The very fact that he didn't tell you until 5 minutes before train time what he had on his mind suggests, to me, that he didn't wish to discuss the case; that he wanted you to accept his decision as final, and that he placed responsibility for his decision on his friends' shoulders only because he hadn't the moral courage to tell the whole truth. Possibly he thought that was the most tactful way to state it; that in so saying he was sparing your feelings the deepest hurt.

* * * *

Incidentally, just what do you mean when you say, "during our stays together . . .?" Is it possible you made the grave mistake of permitting the relationship to drift beyond the limits of conventional courtship? If so, no wonder he decided against installing you in a mother's place in his children's lives. I can imagine that a man who had been staidly married for 20 years would almost involuntarily look askance on a woman who took the aggressive in courtship, and there is something decidedly aggressive about your going 300 miles and back to see him. His idea of the perfect wife-woman, no doubt, is one cut to the old-fashioned pattern of ladyhood—a woman who waits quitely for the man to take the initiative in bringing about meetings; a woman reserved and dignified, proud and self-respecting; a woman who takes her time about saying "yes" to his insistent proposals of marriage; a woman who wouldn't "run after a man," as we say, if he were, indeed, "the last man on earth."

* * * *

As a matrimonial minded man who has seen fit to recant his tentative commitment to you, it seems logical to suppose he may have another matrimonial candidate in view. Therefore, the best advice I can give you is to bow yourself out of the picture with your chin up. However, if you haven't the courage or stamina to make a gesture at once so painful and so proud, I can only suggest that you deftly maneuver the relationship back into the channel of impersonal, unexacting friendship, sustained by an exchange of casual correspondence. Leave it up to the man to come to see you or not, as he chooses; and definitely discontinue your practice of going to see him. You may yet win him, if you don't put him entirely to flight by too hot pursuit.

Dresses Go Foreign.

There's a dash of the foreign in dresses for spring. Colors are gayer than ever, and in prints, they've gone to Egypt, China, Hawaii, Spain, Central Europe, Austria, the South Sea Islands and India. Not only has the foreign element entered into the print picture, but also the Spanish bolero which is a "must" with almost every summer frock, or in the dirndl dress, which has left the play-clothes field, and is now adapted for street wear with a peasant babushka tied over the head. Foreign, too, is the embroidery seen on many a smart dress for spring.

Dramatic Black and White for Spring

Different Scents for Day and Night Favored by Baroness von Wrangle

The Baroness von Wrangle, who has stated on several occasions that men ought to get more color in their wardrobes, also has definite ideas about color and drama for women. "Perfume," she said in an interview recently, "is as necessary to a complete ensemble as smart accessories." The baroness advocates an entirely different type of perfume for day and evening—spicy and a bit heavy for evening and light and subtle for daytime. If you want an elusive scent about you, she suggests using eau de cologne, particularly for business. "Heavy perfumes," she declared, "have no place in an office. In the majority of cases, they are offensive to everybody."

In choosing perfumes, the Baroness von Wrangle has this to say: "Select a perfume which seems to harmonize with your personality. The perfume you admire on someone else may not be pleasing for you at all. If you want to be exclusive in your choice of perfumes, her advice is to choose a fragrance which will not be easily recognizable—this usually means a combination of flower odors, rather than just one. The Baroness von Wrangle will be in a local store for consultation Monday and Tuesday.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, March 25.

WELL, WE have just been permitted to peer at, and even sniff, the posies of the rich folks out on Long Island and up in Westchester County. But mustn't touch of course! Even so, I'm sure we of the city proletariat are happy to be able to look at the fancy gardens set up for our delight (and $40,000 in prizes) in a midtown hall. Flowers, naturally are largely rumors to us of Manhattan, except when we pause to look at the show-windows of Irene Hayes, Betty Compton Walker and other florists. Thus we rejoice and are exceedingly glad when the so-called "International Flower Show" is presented each spring at the Grand Central Palace on Lexington avenue. On payment of a small fee we are permitted to saunter freely among the gorgeous exhibits of those ladies and gentlemen who actually grow real flowers on their lavish suburban estates. And it is no small pleasure to us transplanted small-towners to whom flowers were once as free and everyday as sun and wind.

Our big flower show has come to be a sort of family affair, in that the more gorgeous exhibits are annually displayed by the same little group of people. Marshall Field is always a topper, and we can pretty nearly follow the flower tastes of his wives. The present Mrs. Field, once Ruth Phipps, offered a magnificent all-white formal garden this year—with pansies, dogwood, lilacs and tulips collaborating on the purity. This striking sight quickly caught the judges' eyes. Another standby is neighbor J. P. Morgan, whose garden this year used huge yellow tulips as the chief color motif. Neighbor Morgan does things so well! And Lawyer Samuel Untermeyer was cheered for his exhibition of a real grape fruit tree in fruit and flower. We thought they grew in restaurants!

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—New York wasn't noisy enough, what with taxi horns, bus rumbles and old ladies hollering "Stop, thief!" So within the last six months several of the big stores have been making their show windows not only beautiful, but audible, too! Christmas bells rang out gloriously from one huge shop on the avenue, and now, just to hail spring, beautiful spring, another store has its windows emitting Swiss yodels and hurdy-gurdy tunes! Honestly, ladies, when we go aisle-wandering nowadays in New York we have changed the old crack about looking to "Just listening, thanks!" . . .

* * * *

After gazing pop-eyed at the Paris imports and the local masterpieces of the fashion world, it was a downright pleasure to look at the new and official Girl Scout styles the other day. Such modest matters as overalls and swing coats, basque shirts and tweed sport jackets, and all kinds of camp clothes. How they did rest these overworked orbs, and I thought what price, Schiaparelli?

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

The Old Ladies.

"Say, do you know that this is the twenty-sixth day of March?"

"Why it is! Say then . . . let's see . . . why next Friday will be the first day of April!"

"It seems like March has come and gone before anybody knew it was here."

"Say, do you know something else? A week from tomorrow will be Passion Sunday . . . and a week from that——"

"Will be Palm Sunday! Why Easter will be here before you know it!"

"Did you ever see anything like the way time flies?"

"The seasons all seem to come earlier than they used to. Why I can remember when we had heavy snow late in March."

"Say, I can remember when we had a big snow April the second. I remember it distinctly because Howard Wilder hitched up his sleigh . . . you remember, dont you . . . how the horse got scared of the bells and ran away?"

"Yes, I remember. Whatever became of Howard, anyway?"

"They moved to California. Leona couldn't stand the winters here. And then he had that arthritis."

"Whatever became of that sister of Howard's . . . the one that . . . got divorced?"

"Mabel? . . . Oh, she married again. They're in Florida."

"Did you know the McVays had come back from Florida?"

"They have! Why they just went there! . . . I knew it was right after Christmas I saw her, and they were going the next week. And now they're back!"

"I can't see where all the time has gone since Christmas. Do you know summer'll be here before we know it?"

"Yes, and then Thanksgiving . . . and next winter."

"Martha's been after me to come out to Pasadena next winter."

"Why don't you go?"

"Well . . . I don't know. I tell her next winter's a long way off."

"It'll be here before you know it. The children want me to close the house next fall and take an apartment. But I don't know."

"It'd be a lot easier on you."

"Yes . . . I guess so. Still . . . well, I never like to plan so far ahead."

"Betty's oldest boy George is giving up his apartment in May, and they want me to take it over . . . but I don't know."

"Where are they going?"

"Young folks now all expect to start in where the old ones leave off."

"They just can't put up with things, can they? You know when I think of all I've gone through . . ."

"Me, too. But that's the way of it. Take Perry, my neice's son. He can't even walk two blocks . . . has to get out the car to go to the drug store."

"Perry! Is he old enough to drive a car?"

"He's 17."

"Seventeen! Why, it just seems yesterday he was a baby . . . and Aline had him in rompers in a pen. How time does go!"

"Doesn't it? You know what! This year's nearly half gone!"

"Yes, it'll be June before you know it. The oak buds are out already."

"Yes, and the lilacs are on the way . . . and the bridal wreath. I don't think I ever saw the spring as pretty as it is this year."

"Me, either. I never saw the grass come out of the earth so green, or the forsythia so golden

"Yes and the dogwood. I never saw it so beautiful."

"I want to get out and enjoy the spring a lot more this year."

"That's the way with me. It passes so quickly."

'Forgotten Age' Children Require Special Care

Period From 2 to 6 Often Time of Neglect, Says Dr. Florence A. Browne in Study for Child Welfare League.

BETTER CARE for childen in the "forgotten age"—2 to 6 years—is one of the main objectives of Dr. Florence A. Browne, pediatrician for the Child Welfare League of America. Through the League, which outlines child caring procedures for 200 child welfare agencies and child caring institutions throughout the United States, Dr. Browne's efforts reach nearly 1,000,000 children.

Between the years of 2 and 6 many children do not receive regular or adequate medical supervision, Dr. Browne maintains. Most mothers recognize the necessity for proper care of babies from the time of birth until they are 2 years old. And when a child reaches 6 and enters school he is given attention by school doctors and nurses. But in the crucial period between he is often neglected.

Program Outlined.

A regular, thorough medical examination of the child at least annually, and with special reference to eyes, ears and throat.

Regular examination of teeth by a dentist.

Examination of heart and lungs annually, with hemoglobin test of the quality of blood, also the Wassermann test for syphilis.

Test of nutritional state by checking height and weight. This should be coupled with study of nutritional needs.

The ideal diet for the forgottten 2-to-6-year-old is suggested by Dr. Browne as follows: A quart of milk a day; a daily teaspoonful of codliver oil the year round. At least one fresh fruit each day, such as orange, apple or tomato; and one cooked fruit—stewed pear, apricot, peach, prune, baked apple, applesauce. The choice may be fairly wide.

Sweets to Be Extras.

"Two cooked vegetables (the green leafy ones, peas, carrots, beans, squash, cauliflower and other common vegetatbles); and one raw vegetable (tomatoes, lettuce, grated carrots, grated turnips, chopped cabbage). One egg daily, especially the egg yolk. One-half to one ounce of butter. Moderate portion of meat about three times a week, with fish as an occasional substitute. For 'fillers,' bread, rice, macaroni, cereal.

"Cake and candy may be allowed occasionally, but always as extras. If a child has difficulty getting down a quart of milk a day in the form of a beverage, use it in custards, puddings and soups."

For prevention of disease among children of this age Dr. Browne recommends vaccination against smallpox, immunization against diphtheria, tuberculin test and whooping cough vaccine.

Sports Also Favored.

The psychological care of the child from 2 to 6 should include encouragement in sports and handwork. Of this phase of child care Dr. Browne says:

"A sport like swimming or ball-playing gives a child the chance to excel; gives him a feeling of accomplishment, of success. Let us suppose that a child does not stand out in his school work; is not particularly outstanding in his own home, because he may be unusually quiet, shy or plain. He feels at a disadvantage in both the home and the school environment; but if he can become a good swimmer or a good ball player, this feeling is offset; he gains a feeling of success; he is given an opportunity to 'shine' which satisfies a human craving that is deep-rooted in us all.

"Today we realize that a small child needs the individual attention that is possible in a home, in the course of normal family life; he needs the sense of security that he feels when he is part of a home group. He needs the affection that comes his way as a member of a normal family."

Dr. Browne received her A. B. degree from Vassar, her M. D. degree from Johns Hopkins. She was for 12 years pediatrician in private practice in Detroit and previously was associated with the Michigan State Department of Health.

Mission Society To Meet April 1

Women's Presbyterial Group to Elect Officers in Chevy Chase Church.

The Woman's Presbyterial Society for Missions will hold its annual meeting and election of officers on Friday, April 1. The session will be at 10:30 a. m. in the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church of which Rev. J. Helman Hollister is pastor and the president, Mrs. J. Claude Keiper, will preside. By special invitation the moderators of the Synod of Baltimore and of the Presbytery of Washington City will be present, together with the active ministers of Presbytery. One from each church is also invited to be the guests of the Presbyterial.

Speakers will be Mrs. L. B. Carruthers and Dr. Henry S. Randolph. Mrs. Carruthers' husband is a physician and dean of the medical school at Miraj, India. A graduate of Macalester College and Columbia University, Mrs. Carruthers spends much of her time assisting the medical students and visiting in the hospital.

Dr. Randolph is superintendent of Asheville Farm School for Boys at Swannanoa, N. C. Himself a native of the Tennessee mountains, and having received his education in Presbyterian mission schools, Dr. Randolph has developed a system of progressive education that has attracted the attention of schools and colleges over the country. A number of foreign students have also been sent to study the school.

Luncheon will be served by the women of the church.

Women of Chevy Chase To Hear Music Program

The music section of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase will hold its monthly tea Monday at the home of Mrs. R. W. Deaver, 2726 Brandywine street, with Mrs. Holland Huntington as cohostess. Mrs. Roland Whitehurst is program chairman.

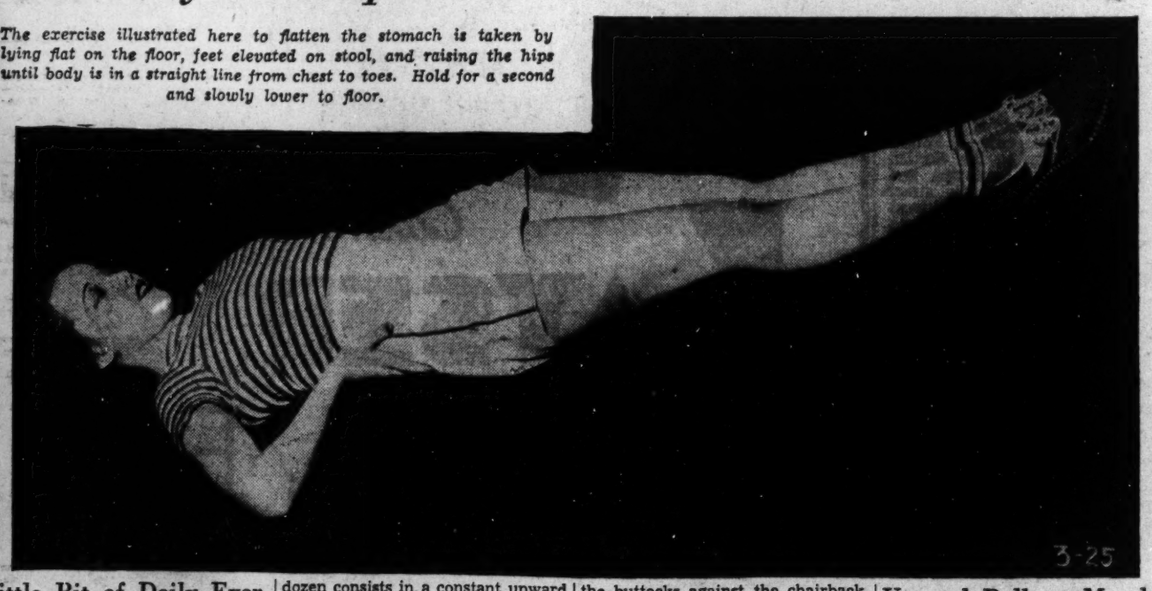
The honored guest will be Mrs. Roberta Campbell Lawson, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, who will give a lecture-recital on Indian songs and legends, accompanied by Miss Loraine Sternberg. A group of piano selections will be presented by James Winship Lewis, of Baltimore.

Scarves for Spring.

The large multicolored, printed or striped scarves will be seen in the fashion parade for spring in a variety of new versions. Not only can they be cleverly draped into smart hats, but they are being tied at the waistline as sashes, serve as gilets for suits, or are folded into collars. One new version of the bright-colored scarf features indifferent colors in each corner, so that the adroit owner can bring out four different color schemes with her draping.

New Styles Require a Stream-Lined Midsection

The exercise illustrated here to flatten the stomach is taken by lying flat on the floor, feet elevated on stool, and raising the hips until body is in a straight line from chest to toes. Hold for a second and slowly lower to floor.



Little Bit of Daily Exercise Keeps 'Tummy' From Spoiling Frocks.

By Ida Jean Kain.

STYLES BEING what they are, a girl has to be firm about her figure. A humpty-dumpty midsection is ruinous!

If you only realized what a little bit of daily exercise can do, you would never have a "tummy" to spoil your prettiest frocks. The abdomen has mighty muscles perfectly capable of holding you to a flat front line. These muscles run up and down, across, and on the bias, and just 10 minutes of daily exercise will give you a nice, firm feeling in the midsection.

The reason we lose our figures in the middle is that so few of our everyday activities exercise these muscles. Neither do we take advantage of the exercise we could get. Take a tip from a famous actress whose substitute for the daily dozen consists in a constant upward stretch, with special emphasis on the upward pull of the lower abdominal muscles.

Pull Up With Muscles.

For her, this exercise program has been amazingly successful. Even when this actress was enceinte she made her own muscles support her extra weight and today she has the figure of an 18-year-old girl. There is really no valid excuse for losing your figure.

The long sitting position gives you the feel of the right posture habit—the one of pulling up with the lower abdominals. Sit against the wall with the small of the back pressed against the wall, legs straight out in front. To flatten the back you are compelled to pull up with the lower abdominal muscles. And from now on you are going to make use of this exercise every time you sit down!

When you are playing bridge or reading, try to get that same firm feeling you had in the long sitting position. This means sitting with the back perfectly straight, with the buttocks against the chairback, and with a right angle at the juncture of hips and trunk. Sit down with the hips and pull up with the lower abdominal muscles.

When you walk, pull "up" with the lower abdominal muscles and with the chest. Don't try to hold the tummy in. The only way you can hold it in is to hold your breath—and that can't go on!

Strengthen Muscles First.

Good posture habits are possible, however, only when the muscles are strong. It may be that you must first tone and firm the abdominal muscles with corrective exercise. Here is an easy exercise which will take up the slack in your muscular girdle and help you to form the habit of using these muscles continuously:

POSITION: Lying on back on floor, feet elevated on stool or low piece of furniture.

MOVEMENT: Raise the hips off the floor until the body is in a straight line from chest to toes. Hold for a second and slowly lower to floor. Rest and repeat exercise six times, later 20 times. Since there is no strain connected with this exercise it can be repeated any number of times.

Younger Set Enlivens Capital's Social World

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

Cherry blossom visitors, already crowding into the Capital, are not the only ones inoculating the local scene with new life. Back into town by highways and trainways members of the younger set are flocking home from college; and social schedules, already shifting into high gear, promise to move along at a lively clip from now until Easter.

HOPE R. MILLER.

Miss Marian Kirk, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Alan G. Kirk, arrived yesterday from Bryn Mawr, and plunged into a round of partying a few hours after she arrived. Last evening she was guest of honor at a dinner given at the F Street Club by Mr. and Mrs. Theo C. Achilles. Included in the company of 18 was Mrs. Achilles' house guest, Miss Margaret Hebbard, of New York. Following the dinner the party went on to the dance of Sulgrave Supper Club.

Miss Kirk's mother, who has been in Long Beach, Calif., for several months, is also back in town. She went to the West Coast last fall to be with Capt. Kirk, who is Operations Officer on the staff of the Chief of Staff of the United States Fleet. Mrs. Kirk, who has taken an apartment at the Fairfax Hotel for a month, will have with her for the next ten days both her daughters, Miss Marian Kirk and Miss Deborah Kirk, who is on vacation from her studies at the Madeira School. Much of their time will also be spent with Mrs. Kirk's mother, Mrs. Frederic L. Chapin, who recently returned from a sojourn in Charleston, S. C.

The Misses Sally and Nancy Fleming, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Irwin, arrived last night from Aurora, N. Y., where they are students at Wells College. They will be here for a ten-day vacation. Also coming in last night were the Misses Elizabeth and Henrietta Nash, debutante daughters of Mrs. Allen Nash, who are home from Vassar College, and who will be guests of honor at a tea to be given by their mother on Wednesday.

From Bryn Mawr College came Miss Mary Alice Sturdevant yesterday afternoon. She is the daughter of Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Edward Warren Sturdevant, who presented her to society at a tea in December. Among the parties she will attend before returning to college April 3 is the luncheon to be given by Miss Dudley Gregory on Thursday. Incidentally, Miss Gregory, who is spending a few days in Buffalo, will be back on Tuesday and will have as her house guest Miss Margaret Huyler, of Hawaii, who is attending Bryn Mawr College and will come to Washington on Wednesday. Miss Gregory's luncheon will be for her.

John Bowler Hull, who is on Spring vacation from Hill School, is visiting his mother, Mrs. Bowler Hull. With him as his guest is John Link, of Sewickley, Pa. The boys will leave next week for Hot Springs to join Mrs. Nordell Lloyd and her son and daughter, Miss Angelica Lloyd and Demarest Lloyd, who will go to the Virginia resort on Monday.

Miss Patricia Griffin, debutante daughter of Commander and Mrs. R. O. Griffin, who returned home from Smith College Wednesday night, will be here until April 7. JUST WHEN members of Washington society seem to have completely stopped making news, comes word from some of our Capital friends who are sojourning in Florida. Mrs. Sidney Cloman departed yesterday by air for Nassau with Capt. and Mrs. John H. Gibbons, whom she has been visiting in Palm Beach for several weeks. The Gibbons joined her in Miami to take the plane.

Travelers returned from Palm Beach report that Mrs. Gibbons is quite the queen of society there, mingling with all the various sets. Her husband, now retired, was Naval Attache at the United States Embassy in London when Whitelaw Reid was our Ambassador there. In addition to their Palm Beach villa, the Gibbons have a home on N street here and a residence in Avon, Conn. The middle of next month will see them back in Georgetown again before taking off for the north.

ANOTHER PERSON who is shaking the dust of Washington off her feet is Mrs. Harry Black, booked to sail today from New York on the Rex. Bound for Rome, she will spend a month with her brother, Henry May, who is chamberlain to His Holiness the Pope. Returning to this country in June, Mrs. Black will go directly to Southampton to open her summer home there.

Mrs. Black is a sister of Lady Bagot, of England, and of Mrs. Wilhelm von Rath, which makes her the aunt of the two pretty von Rath twins, Marie and Cecilia, who were presented to society here a year or two ago.

HERE'S NEWS about Merritt Swift, former member of the diplomatic service and until a month or so ago an enlivener of the Washington stag line. Sebastian's former wife was Mrs. Eric Dunstan, who was killed so tragically in an automobile accident in Mexico last winter.

EITHER LENT, the international situation, or the recession is making a difference in Capital society this year. Although things usually slow down at this time, not for ages have they been quite as dead as they are now. The most exciting thing that can happen is a small, informal dinner.

The Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. George Messersmith have cards out for a buffet supper next Wednesday evening at their Georgetown residence on Twenty-ninth street. Miss Margaret Frazier has asked a few friends to dine with her on Monday evening, and Mr. and Mrs. John Littell will give a similar party the following evening, Tuesday. Mrs. George T. Summerlin, jr., has a more formal dinner scheduled for Tuesday evening, April 5 . . . Mr. and Mrs. Ernest D. Draper have cards out for cocktails at the Shoreham on the twenty-ninth of this month. Mr. Draper was recently switched from Assistant Secretary of Commerce to a governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

Mrs. Harris Has Tea for Motor Corps

Informal Gathering Precedes Red Cross Convention.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Miss Mabel Boardman, executive secretary of the American Red Cross and chairman of its volunteer service, was guest of honor yesterday at a tea given by Mrs. Louis Edward Harris, for members of the motor corps of the local chapter. Mrs. Harris, for some years an active member of the corps, is in charge of the St. Eliabeths Hospital detail.

Miss Hilda Yen, who was to have been a guest of honor also, was unable to attend due to a broadcast she was giving and participation in the conference on world peace, in session at the Washington Hotel. Miss Boardman, Mrs. Harris and a few guests who arrived early, heard her speak over the radio, although they did not have opportunity to greet her at the tea. Miss Yen's father is president of the Red Cross in China.

The party was given by Mrs. Harris as an informal gathering preceding the Red Cross convention in California in May which both Miss Boardman and Mrs. Howard R. Krinbill, chairman of the motor corps, will attend. Several of the members of the group were not able to be present as they are now vacationing in the South. Among them were Miss Dorothy Gould Fowler, and Mrs. Fannie B. Ingram, both of whom are in Florida.

Take Little Time From Helpful Service

Yesterday was one of the few occasions on which the motor corps members have gathered for a party of their own. Their duties include taking patients from the various veterans' hospitals for rides about the city; to motion-picture shows on certain afternoons and similar volunteer service. During the past month they have added to their assistance to the veterans, aid to the crippled children of Landon School whom they have taken from the school to the WPA Art Project.

There are 51 active members in the corps. Yesterday two of them appeared in costumes akin to their uniforms, when they arrived at the informal tea. They were Miss Marion Shouse, who came directly from Fort Myer, where they had been riding and were in attractive riding clothes.

Mrs. Harris wore a gown of blue lame and Miss Boardman was in brown. Mrs. Krinball wore a blue and white print frock with a hat tied under the chin, and Mrs. Karl Schmitt, vice chairman of the corps, wore black lace.

Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, who became a member of the corps last fall and is actively interested in its work, brought with her as a guest of the afternoon Princess Mary Syn Wittgenstein.

Chairman and Vice Chairman Pour

Mrs. Krinbill and Mrs. Schmitt poured tea and coffee at a table in the dining room, appointed with a center bouquet of calla lilies and purple tulips. Elsewhere in the house there were bouquets of spring flowers.

Among those who attended were Miss Elizabeth Adams, Miss Polly Wirgman, the Misses Gertrude and Helen Aldrich, Mrs. Samuel Broadbent, Mrs. William D. Donnelly, Mrs. W. D. Harris, Mrs. J. C. Haskell, Mrs. Z. J. Hendricks, Mrs. William H. Luckett, Mrs. Blanche McKenzie, Mrs. Edward McCrahon, Mrs. Frederick Neithamer and Mrs. W. W. Wheeler.

Audrey Wurdemann, Poetess, Expects to Make Home Here

Winner of Pulitzer Prize Explains She Polishes Works in Mind Before Putting Them on Paper; She's Writing First Novel Now.

Poems all finished before they are written are those which come from the pen—or the typewriter—of Audrey May Wurdemann, winner of the Pulitzer poetry prize in 1935.

High up on the "hurricane deck" of the Library of Congress, where her husband, Joseph Auslander, has his office as poetry consultant, Miss Wurdemann talked of many things, among them poetry and cooking. She was modest about her writing but revealed a hint of pride about her ability in the culinary arts. "I have no hobblies; I really have no particular interests except my writing," she said thoughtfully, "but I am quite a good cook."

It was easier to imagine this delightful young woman with raven hair framing her face, as looking off into the springtime and interpreting it in verse than as stirring up cakes and cookies. There was a deliberate quietness in her manner but a decisiveness about her opinions which belied the description of "languid" often applied to her. As she talked, the pupils of her large grey eyes dilated until they seemed as black as her hair—. . . and she wore a simply made black velvet dress to match.

• • • •

She is in Washington for a week and will then return to New York for a fortnight. She and her husband have been commuting between here and there most of the winter, but expect to come to Washington to make their home next fall.

Miss Wurdemann is now engaged in writing a noval—her first, she says—and she finds it more tedious than poetry. She carries her poems around with her a long time before she writes them down, she explained, but the actual writing is rapid. Sometimes she thinks about her poems a month, two months—or two years, and has them completely formulated before she puts a line on paper. She does not always write them in this way—she has no rule about it. She writes as the occasion and inspiration demand, and often this means putting the finished product on paper all at once.

The novel will not be a complete departure from the world of poetry. It is to be the life of Keats, somewhat fictionized. Miss Wurdemann has done only a few chapters of it, although, like her poems, it was well formulated in her mind before she began.

• • • •

She has no patience with the experimental poets of the day, whose books may be opened to any page "with the knowledge that they will not make sense."

"I could do as well, writing at random, with one finger on the typewriter, and I'd have just as much idea what it was all about when I had finished," she said. She admitted her poetry was quite conventional and made no apologies for its being simple and direct in expressing its meaning.

She and Mr. Auslander both do much of their writing at night, she said. Her own comes rather fitfully. She writes in every spare moment for a month or so and then puts her poetry aside for a period. This is a verseless interim and she is making use of it for an excursion into prose.

• • • •

Next month Miss Wurdemann will be in Washington again for the biennial convention of the National League of American Pen Women and she has been named as its candidate for president to succeed Mrs. Phyllis Fergus Hoyt. If she is elected and comes here to reside, it will add another distinguished name to the list of national presidents of large women's organizations who make the Capital their home.

She first became a member of the Pen women when a small branch was formed in Seattle about 12 years ago. She is "not much of a joiner," she says, but she is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa, honorary scholastic fraternity, and of Delta Gamma sorority, University of Washington chapter.

Women's City Club Gives Yearly Tea For Life Members

The Women's City Club yesterday afternoon entertained at its annual life members' tea, with Judge Mary O'Toole, who inaugurated the affair in 1925, among the guests of honor. About 60 of the 200 life members of the club were present.

A broadcast was held on the occasion of the first tea for life members, with Frederick William Wile, as the radio speaker and Judge O'Toole presiding. Yesterday Judge O'Toole was among the past presidents who received with Mrs. Gladys Ball Middlemiss, acting president. Others were Mrs. J. Garfield Riley, Mrs. William Lee Corbin, Mrs. John S. Bennett, Dr. Frances Foye and Mrs. Lyman B. Swormstedt.

A feature of the afternoon was a short musicale by Mrs. Mary Izant Couch, pianist, who played a group of Schubert numbers and Brahms waltzes. The clubhouse was decorated with bowls of pear and cherry blossoms and a bouquet of spring flowers formed the centerpiece for the tea table. Mrs. Harry M. Packard and Mrs. Esther N. Dodge poured.

Some New Charmers at the Zoo

Georgia and Georgette (upper), baby chimps just in from near the Firestone rubber plantations in West Africa, may become the Zoo's "most popular" if they continue to radiate their charm. They are gifts from George Siebold, of Rockville, Md. The cheetah (right) was frightened when his picture was taken yesterday. He and his mate also are new arrivals. Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

THAT FREE DREAM HOUSE.

(An imaginary chat between a United States official and one of the 1,000,000 citizens dreaming of a new villa or penthouse.)

CITIZEN: Are you putting an automatic dishwasher in my free Government house?

Doris Duke, . . fairy godmother

CITIZEN: Who, me? What kind of a more abundant life is this, anyway?

* * * *

OFFICIAL: Well, let your wife wash 'em, then.

CITIZEN: She can wipe 'em, too . . . You don't catch me wiping no dishes in no free Government house.

OFFICIAL: What do you mean, free? You pay rent, or you pay on the mortgage.

* * * *

CITIZEN: Aw, you're just kidding. How about a water softener? The wife's just nuts about a water softener, so she can wash her hair.

OFFICIAL: Listen, mugg! No water softener. What's wrong with a barrel of rainwater? An' the houses ain't free!

CITIZEN: Imagine Uncle Sam collecting rent! Huh! That'd be competing with private industry. How about installing one of those gadgets in the sink that grinds up tin cans and gin bottles and sends 'em down the drain?

"—dreams of the new free house"

OFFICIAL: And would you like a built-in billiard table? Get this straight: We of the USHA just lend the money to your home town, which builds the apartments and collects the rent. Nothing free, and no fancy gadgets.

CITIZEN: Maybe I'm in the wrong department. I'd kinda like a gas or oil furnace with a thermostat, too.

OFFICIAL: And an electric horse? . . . Maybe you are in the wrong department. If you want to borrow money to build a house, see the FHA.

* * * *

CITIZEN: Passing the buck, eh? . . . My wife says the kitchen and the bathroom gotta have lavender tile walls to match in our free house.

OFFICIAL: You're lucky if the plaster stays on . . . If you borrow money for a new house from some sap, the Government guarantees the mortgage via FHA.

CITIZEN: Then why should the sap worry whether I pay or not, if the Government guarantees the mortgage? Is this a skin game? What I want is a sun lamp in each room, so I don't hafta go out in the hot sun to get sunburnt.

* * * *

OFFICIAL: Or would you prefer an ice-skating rink in the basement? . . . Get this, dope: We're just helping you build or rent a better house than the shanty you've got.

CITIZEN: Another crack about my shanty and I sock you . . . Listen, stupid: I know you're giving away these free houses to start a boom . . . I'm willing to take one if you'll put in an elevator for grandma, who can't climb steps.

OFFICIAL (hopelessly): Could you wait for the swimming pool till later?

"—from log cabin to fairyland"

CITIZEN: Couldn't you put it in the recreation room when you put in the skating rink?

OFFICIAL: What you want is a fairy godmother. Maybe you'd better let Doris Duke see what kind of a house she can build you for $4,000 . . . She's interested in housing, and she has good taste.

* * * *

OFFICIAL: Did you ever try building a log cabin?

CITIZEN: What do you think I am, an economic royalist?

OFFICIAL: I wonder if you could borrow a spade and help dig the excavation for your house?

* * * *

CITIZEN (indignantly): Just like you Government officials, trying to enslave us.

OFFICIAL (triumphantly): Here's the application blank you have to fill out. Come and see me next year.

CITIZEN (aside to his wife, who has been waiting with a big basket to take home the free drapes and linen): If we play it cagy maybe we can get three free houses—one from the USHA, one from the FHA and one from FCA.

*USHA is United States Housing Authority, which advances money to towns for housing; FHA is Federal Housing Authority, which guarantees mortgages for new houses, and *FCA helps the farmer put a new roof over his head.

Laundry Man Disputes High Cost of Food

Pies Used as Evidence Girls Could Eat on $5.34 a Week.

Sen. Wheeler's Daughter Backs Workers on $20 Minimum.

Pies and muffins were introduced as evidence before the wage conference on dry cleaning and laundry industries yesterday as a Senator's daughter, Miss Frances Wheeler, a Howard University professor and two out-of-town laundry operators testified.

The pastry, baked in a local restaurant, was introduced by Sam Ruberstein, employer representative at the conference, to show the quality of food served in a "low-cost" restaurant. He said meals could be purchased at from 25 to 35 cents at the particular restaurant from which they came; meal tickets can be bought at a 10 per cent saving. On this basis, Rubenstein declared, meals for the entire week cost only $5.34.

Employers have asked for a minimum wage of $11.35 weekly, as compared to $20.08 asked by the employes. In their budget, employers have estimated $7.50 for room and board; employe representatives are asking $8 for food and $5 for board.

Miss Wheeler, daughter of Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, represented the Laundry Workers Organizing Committee. She appeared before the conference to specify conditions to be considered in renting a room desirable from the standpoint of health and morals.

The specifications included location reasonably accessible to public conveyances, healthful neighborhood in a "good moral" location, a bed with good springs and mattress, a room in good repair with a double window and cross ventilation and bathroom available for each four persons in the house.

Miss Wheeler, who said she did not receive any money for her work, added that a minimum of $1.20 a day should be allotted for food because "workers in the dry cleaning and laundry industries require good substantial food in order to work."

Pay Lower Elsewhere.

W. P. Robinson, Howard University professor, asserted $5 was the minimum which could be allowed for weekly room rent, citing authorities on the housing situation for colored people in the District.

C. Archer Smith, of Fredericksburg, Va., said out-of-town firms will "creep in" if a too-high minimum wage is set for District laundry workers; he said his operators are paid a minimum of 20 cents an hour—and that his business operates within 20 miles of the District. John Horst, Baltimore laundry operator, said the average wage there was 15 per cent below the current Washington standard.

Yesterday's hearing was the final meeting open to the public for testimony. The conference will meet again Tuesday in executive session but will permit briefs to be submitted upholding any previous testimony.

Police Hold Man In Charging $500 Goods to Mission

After four weeks' searching for a man believed to have "charged" about $500 worth of goods to the Central Union Mission, detectives stumbled upon the man directly in front of Police Headquarters yesterday.

Detective Sergts. Tom Sullivan and Arthur Trammell were leaving District Court when they saw the man sitting on a bench in Judiciary Park.

Police say the man, discharged a month ago as a driver for the mission, had charged about $500 worth of goods to it, including everything from butter and eggs to a new rear axle. He was arrested and held at the First Precinct station.

Colored Group Would Renew Keys Inquiry

Congressional Study of 56 Killings by Police Also Sought.

Action to reopen the Keys case, in which a colored war veteran was killed by a policeman who was exonerated by the grand jury, was taken last night by the Federation of Civic Associations at a meeting held in the District Building.

The federation decided to seek court action, on the ground that findings of the grand jury were contrary to the evidence, and to coordinate with local and national groups seeking investigation by Congress of 56 killings of colored citizens by members of the police department.

Emancipation day in the District of Columbia, April 16, was selected as the date for a mass meeting to organize forces and provide funds for carrying out the federation's plans toward these ends, not only on a city-wide basis, but also in co-operation with civic and fraternal organizations throughout the country.

A report on increase and promotion of colored personnel in the police department was made by George W. Beasley. He stated that a proposed precinct in the neighborhood of Capital View, in the northeast section, had failed of sanction by the Commissioners, the Bureau of the Budget, and the Congressional committee on appropriations.

With reference to appointment of colored men as lieutenants on the police force, he reported that only one was eligible for examination for such appointment at this time, and that he refused to take the necessary examination.

The birthday of Booker T. Washington, April 5, was endorsed as the date for beginning a city-wide clean-up campaign.

Capital Symphony Hailed at Columbia

Columbia, S. C., March 25.—An enthusiastic audience packed the civic auditorium tonight to hear the National Symphony Orchestra in the first of three concerts given as part of Columbia's annual choral festival.

On its second Southern tour in the 1937-1938 season the National Symphony returned to Columbia for the fourth consecutive year.

The musical celebration is being given with the aid of noted soloists and the Shandon Choral Society, a local chorus of more than 200 voices.

Leopard Cub, Cheetahs, Rare Birds Uncrated as Keepers Prepare for Record Crowd; Frisky Penguin Chick Requires Fence.

National Zoological Park, the Capital's ace drawing card for visitors and localities alike, has several added attractions for the huge influx expected today and tomorrow.

Director William M. Mann and Head Keeper William H. Blackburne yesterday:

(1) Uncrated two little girl chimpanzees guaranteed cute enough to melt the heart of—

(2) The bronze statue of an ant eater standing in front of the small mammal house which was unveiled yesterday by Mrs. Louis A. Simon, wife of the Treasury's supervising architect.

(3) Uncrated a pair of cheetahs, or hunting leopards, first to be exhibited here in several years.

(4) Uncrated a baby African leopard, a pair of wattled starlings from India and a pitta bird, also from India.

With that, the two Williams shook hands and warned each other to get set for a possible record-breaking week-end at the zoo.

The tiny "chimps," called Georgia and Georgette for their donor, George Siebold, were still wobbly after a 25-day ocean voyage that ended Thursday. Dr. Mann and Blackburne were at the dock to meet them. The anthropoid charmers were presented to the Zoo, along with the leopard, by Siebold, a former Rockville, Md., resident who is manager of the Firestone rubber plantations in Liberia.

Dr. Mann, who has an uncanny talent for striking animal bargains, bought the cheetah pair from Central Park Zoo "for almost nothing" and he also struck a favorable deal for the birds while in New York.

While the ant eater statue was being dedicated, the Zoo's flesh and blood specimen was being transferred from temporary quarters in the monkey house to its permanent cage in the mammal house. Sculptor Erwin Springweiler, who received the $300 Speyer Award for this particular work at the National Academy of Design exhibition in New York recently, attended the ceremonies.

Edward Rowan, superintendent of the Treasury's painting and sculpture section, made the presentation speech. Dr. Mann accepted the bronze effigy in behalf of the Zoo. The animal's name is Myrmecophaga tridactyla, but they call the live one "Nosey," for short.

Meantime, the keeper of the Zoo's birdhouse, Malcolm Davis, announced that the baby penguin is becoming so frisky he's had to build a 6-inch "fence" to guard against its falling into the pool and drowning.

Penguins have to be taught to swim, and Davis is taking no chances on this precious specimen, only baby jackass penguin in America.

Would-Be Suicide Lives With Three Holes in His Head

Wounded four times in the chest and head, an unemployed, 53-year-old cement worker was found in a dying condition yesterday afternoon in the basement of his home at Cherrydale, Va.

Arlington County police said the wounds were self inflicted.

The man, Howard P. Hopkins, was found by his wife when she returned to their home at 2116 North Monroe street. She collapsed.

Rushed to Georgetown Hospital by the Clarendon rescue squad, Hopkins was found to have three wounds in his head and one in his chest. Physicians said one bullet, fired into the brain, split, one portion emerging from the right eye and the other from the right side of the head.

Passers-by Seize Youth About to Leap Into River

Seeing him climb to the railing of Highway Bridge, three passersby late yesterday wrestled with Thomas A. Loebsack, 21-year-old counterman, of 1219 L street northwest, to keep him from leaping into the Potomac River.

The three, L. B. Parker, of Arlington; William L. Larkins, 326 H street northeast, and a third unidentified man, held Loebsack while Ray L. Miller, of Arlington, summoned Park Policeman P. A. Blackburn.

The young man at first refused to give his name, but was identified from papers in his pockets, including a note which mentioned domestic difficulties. He was taken to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation, after police subdued him.

Bills Offered To Control D.C. Fire Risk Rates

House and Senate Given Plan After Study of Insurance Cost.

Bills giving the District superintendent of insurance specific authority to regulate fire insurance rates in Washington were introduced in the Senate and House yesterday by chairmen of the respective District committees.

Sponsored by J. Balch Moor, superintendent of insurance, the identical measures are the outgrowth of an investigation of local insurance rates instituted during the current fiscal year with the employment of an expert.

Moor said that although his department had effected a reduction of $150,000 a year in fire insurance rates in the District since the first of the year some companies have challenged the authority of the District department to exercise the control under its general organic act.

10 Per Cent Slash.

The reduction, Moor said, includes a cut of 10 per cent in the rates on dwellings and some modifications in the rates on commercial property.

The superintendent told the House sub-committee on District appropriations a year ago that Washington property owners had been overcharged $10,000,000 in 12 years by fire insurance companies because of the high premiums in comparison with the comparative small hazards and losses.

It was on the basis of his testimony that Congress set up the job of a special investigator.

States Have Like Law.

Moor explained that the majority of States have laws similar to the one he is proposing for Washington. Besides giving the department authority to regulate fire insurance rates, the act would enable the superintendent to keep a closer check on the operations of the companies.

The section of the bill having to do with adjustment of rates states:

"The superintendent is empowered to investigate the necessity for an adjustment of the rates on any or all fire and lightning insurance risks and to order an adjustment of such rates whenever he determines, after investigation, that the profit derived there from for a period of time not less than five years immediately preceding such investigation is excessive, inadequate, unjust, or unreasonable."

Cellar Fire Burns 2 Hours in Home

Starting in the basement and burning its way through partitions in the upper floors, a one-alarm fire blazed for nearly two hours at 922 Sheridan street northwest last night.

Firemen said damage was confined to the first floor and basement, but that flames were extinguished only with difficulty. Four people were living in the home, listed to Mrs. W. F. Edgar.

Group Backs Ban on Union For Firemen

Burroughs Citizens Fight Move for Repeal of 1920 Statute.

Opposition to repeal of the 1920 statute prohibiting affiliation of District policemen and firemen with labor unions was expressed last night by the Burroughs Citizens Association meeting at Burroughs School. The association adopted a resolution opposing repeal of the law, so the Firemen's Association, formerly the Officers Association, might join the International Association of Fire Fighters, affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The association adopted another resolution urging that property owners be served personally with notice that hearings are to be held on assessments for street improvements. Members held that hardships are frequently borne by property owners under the present system of notification by advertisement.

The Anacostia Citizens Association, meeting at Anacostia Junior-Senior High School, affirmed for the third time its opposition to legalized horse racing in the District. A motion was adopted asking that R street southeast be opened from Seventeenth street to Eighteenth street southeast with the understanding that necessary private property had been dedicated for the purpose to the District government.

The association requested that benches be provided in Anacostia Park that street lights be placed on Seventeenth street southeast from Q street southeast to Minnesota avenue, on Q street from Sixteenth to Seventeenth streets and on Ridge street from Sixteenth street to Minnesota avenue.

Policeman Dies After Leg Is Cut in Fall Down Steps

Collapsing at Nichols avenue and W street southeast from loss of blood after he had accidentally cut a blood vessel in his leg, James I. Hicks, 54, a retired policeman, died at Casualty Hospital last night.

Police found Hicks unconscious, lying in the road, and traced a trail of blood from that intersection to the 2200 block of Shannon place southeast where he had been visiting.

There friends said that he apparently cut his leg on a flowerbox when he stumbled and fell going down the front steps, but failed to realize the seriousness of the accident. Hicks, who lived at 1102 W street southeast, had retired from the force a year ago; he served as a patrolman in the First and Fifth precincts.

Scott to Seek G. H. A. Row House Study

Plans Resolution on Medical Society's Attacks on Group Idea.

Rep. Shafer Also Intends to Press for an Investigation.

Representative Scott (Democrat), of California, yesterday replied to the challenge of Dr. F. X. McGovern, spokesman of the District Medical Society, with an announcement that he will introduce a resolution in the House Monday authorizing an investigation of the society's fight against the Group Health Association.

Scott explained that he had not answered Dr. McGovern's letter earlier because he has been out of the city.

Shafer Also Seeks Probe.

Dr. McGovern Thursday issued a statement denying Scott's account of the refusal of a local hospital to permit a GHA surgeon to operate on a Government employe and challenged him to produce the evidence.

Representative Shafer (Republican), of Michigan, joined in the attack on the medical society yesterday with a statement that he would suggest that the health subcommittee of the House District Committee, of which he is a member, investigate the matter.

Shafer said that from the information in his possession he agreed with Scott that an airing of the fight between the society and the GHA is needed.

Expects Co-operation.

Scott's statement follows:

"I have read the letter to which Dr. McGovern refers in his newspaper interview. The letter was written March 23 and arrived in my office on March 24 while I was in New York. I just returned from New York last night and this morning I had the first opportunity to read the letter which he had released to the press. He says in his letter that I had made the questioned statement without full knowledge of the facts, or that someone misrepresented the facts to me.

"I made the statement on what were purported to be facts presented to me by officers of the Group Health Association. They say the statement was true. Dr. McGovern says that it is not true. This seems to indicate that an investigation of the entire controversy by a select committee of Congress is the best answer. I shall therefore place a resolution authorizing an investigation in the House Monday. All facts can then be brought to light and the proper steps can be taken.

"I am sure, from Dr. McGovern's letter, that the Medical Society of the District of Columbia will support me in my request for an investigation."

Students From Presbyterian School in Carolina Mountains Present Play in D. C. as Their Leader Praises Their Origins

The boys and girls of the Great Smoky Mountains of North Carolina and Tennessee are from the original Scotch-Irish stock which came out of Europe to America in the seventeenth century, Dr. Clarence Higgins, president of the Asheville Farm School, told the Father and Son Hobby Night banquet at the Chevy Chase Presbyterian Church last night.

"First these sturdy immigrants went to New York, and there they did not mix freely with the Dutch," said Dr. Higgins.

"They then went on to Pennsylvania, where they had much the same experience.

"So they pushed South, and they wound up in the mountains of the South. Today they live in North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia and Kentucky, much as they have for more than 200 years."

Dr. Higgins described the rugged Presbyterianism of the men and women and the boys and girls of the "Great Smokies." He took his audience on an imaginary tour of the mountainous regions north and south and west of Asheville, and related adventures he had had there as a missionary for his church, which undertook rehabilitation of the region more than half a century ago, and has established schools and colleges throughout the region.

"Dads" and their sons filled the assembly room of the church. The gathering was the largest of its kind in the history of the church.

Dr. K. S. Gibson (left), Joe Baldwin (center), toastmaster, and Dr. H. S. Randolph.

As a feature of the evening, Dr. K. S. Gibson, of the Bureau of Standards, gave a demonstration of light phenomena. Toastmaster was Joseph Baldwin, and the song leader was Edward F. Lacey.

A happy exhibit, displaying the handicraft of the youngsters of the church, attracted fathers, sons and guests alike in the big church school building.

The business committee in charge of last night's affair was composed of Roger Marsden and Joe Baldwin. The program committee was composed of Merritt Smith and George Earley.

Other committee included hobbies, Guy Earley, William D. Appel and Edward Pierce; decorations, Ralph Ingram and Edward Lacey, while the host to the guests from Asheville was Charles K. Davies, jr.

Shirley Temple Is Sure-Fire As 'Rebecca'

Diminutive Star Triumphs in Capitol Picture; 'Spices' a Hit.

"REBECCA OF SUNNYBROOK FARM." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the Kate Douglas Wiggin story, adapted to the screen by Karl Tunberg and Don Ettinger, with music by Gordon and Revel, Pollack and Mitchell and Pokrass and Yellen, starring Shirley Temple, with Randolph Scott, Jack Haley, Gloria Stuart, Phyllis Brooks, Helen Westley, "Slim" Summerville, Bill Robinson, J. Edward Bromberg, Alan Dinehart, Dixie Dunbar, Paul Hurst, William Demarest, Paul Harvey, Franklin Pangborn and the Raymond Scott Quintet. Directed by Allan Dwan. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris. At Loew's Capitol Theater.

The years rest lightly on Miss Shirley Temple. The little old lady looks younger and spryer in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" than she did months ago, also she has trained off the slight surplus fattage she then possessed.

With its face lifted and edges trimmed off, that ancient best-seller, "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" furnishes an excellent vehicle for La Temple. She and tap-dances, her acting o[illegible] more pretty nuances than ever [illegible] he has one sequence (when [illegible] is being dragged away from Sunnybrook) that is a real "tear-jerker." Yesterday's audience had a wonderful time and broke into applause at the end of the picture.

The 1938 version of "Rebecca" presents her as a juvenile radio star, over whose person and earnings a nasty battle is waged by her Broadwayite stepfather and his new wife versus heroic Aunt Miranda, played by Helen Westley, who turns the performance of her movie career in portraying this acid-tonged, kind-hearted old lady. When it looks as though Shirley is a flop over the air waves, her low-down step-papa dumps her on Aunt Miranda, only to pop up like a bad penny when Shirley suddenly lands in the money.

New Songs Score.

There are some ingratiating new songs, including "Come and Get Your Happiness" and "An Old Straw Hat, Overalls and a Wornout Pair of Shoes," done by Shirley and "Alone With You" done quite superlatively by Gloria Stuart and Jack Haley.

Part of the reason that "Rebecca" is going to be a big boxoffice mop-up lies in its all-round quality of direction, production and casting. The one and only Bill Robinson tap dances with Shirley. Slim Summerville mopes quaintly as the long discarded suitor of Aunt Miranda. Jack Haley is appealingly boobish as an ever anxious "yes man." And while Randolph Scott isn't the strongest leading man imaginable, he does more acting and behaves less like Bill Hart than usual.

In one song, Gloria Stuart reveals hitherto unknown qualities of roguery and lure. Singing "Alone With You" teasingly at Jack Haley, Gloria shows like an embryo Dietrich. Phyllis Brooks has a little lollypop of a part of which she makes what she can.

"Spices" is Spectacular.

Big, bright and "booful" as are the "Spices of 1938," it seems strange that a stage show chosen to go with a Shirley Temple picture should offer not only a slightly tempered version of the strip tease as well as some refined nudity, not to mention various jokes of the deepest blue.

From a spectacular viewpoint the "Spices" leave nothing to be desired. The docking of the Queen Mary to the blasts of a giant fog horn, the monster robot, the jewel box ballet and a flock of other scenes were all a real treat in scope, novelty and artistic lighting.

But it remained for a pair of young acrobats, Dick and Dorothy Remy ,we understand it is their first appearance with the "Spices"), to make the big personal hit of the revue. Dick is skinny and Dorothy is a butterball and don't think you've seen acrobats until you've seen them. Their pretty sense of humor and smart planning of their turn help along an act that for sheer skill and originality needs no help.

Count Berni Vici, as the sponsor of this lavish show, deserves no end of credit. Every performer from the count and his "Swingettes" to the prancing merry-merry was on his or her toes. Among the smartest were Wally Brown, a comic whose unique speech-tangling should eventually land him in Hollywood; John Paul Jones, who sang "Let Me Be Born Again" in unforgettable style; Doris Dupont, tap dancing like a machine gun; pantomimist Dave Tannen, and Taras and Masters, figure dancers of the finest.

Yesterday's early crowd received a big apple from Phil Lampkin and his lads. There was a little delay in installing the huge contraptions of the "Spices," so Phil donated an extra "jam session," much appreciated by the audience. The regular orchestra specialty this week is a bit on the classic side and features some delightful playing by the first violin—or should he be called the concertmaster?

Columbia

Repeat engagements are accorded only to those photoplays which find public favor sufficient to warrant their being held over. In the case of "Happy Landing," the latest Henie film, most credit goes to the blond, dimpled ice-skater, and the rest to a set of hard-working supporters, Don Ameche, Cesar Romero, Ethel Merman, and Jean Hersholt.

Romero is an egotistic bandleader, for whom Merman totes a torch. Ameche loves Henie, but in vain, until she eventually discovers his true romantic worth. Which would be after a series of episodes in which she performs intricate measures on her shining skates and just allowance of footage for the exhibition of the talents of various members of the cast.

They do say Miss Henie has one of the most compellingly captivating smiles in Hollywod. 'Tis true. The cherubic little girl has proven a great drawing-card. She has a shining innocence which couples with her uncanny skill on the blades to make her something new, something nice.

Ameche's radio fans should demand better roles for this young man with the so-hearty laugh. His is a thankless part—this waiting around to be appreciated. Romero displays some fancy tantrums, dress clothes and dance steps. He seems to have a great deal of fun.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

'Jezebel' Reveals Grim Drama on Earle Screen; 'March of Time' Joins 'Snow White,' at Keith's

Bette Davis Stars in Role of Slight Sympathy; Fine Stage Bill.

"JEZEBEL." Warner Brothers picturization of the stage play by Owen Davis, sr., adapted to the screen by Clements Ripley, Aben Finkel and John Huston, starring Bette Davis, with Henry Fonda, George Brent, Donald Crisp, Margaret Lindsay, Fay Bainter, Henery O'Neill, John Litel, Richard Cromwell, Spring Byington, Gordon Oliver, Theresa Harris, Irving Pichel, Georges Renevant and Eddie Anderson. Directed by William Wyler. Previewed Wednesday, March 23. At the Earle Theater.

It is not a pleasant recital of human events that is recounted in this film play of the New Orleans of the 1850's. It is, however, a powerful and a gripping one that will leave a deep impression upon the consciousness of thoughtful theatergoers.

BELL.

As its name so vigorously implies, "Jezebel" is largely the personal history of the social and emotional life of a wilfull, stubborn and vindictive young woman who was her own worst enemy. It makes slight effort to ameliorate the sinister implications of its highly dramatic story by undertaking to camouflage with counterfeit sympathy roles that are not in the least sympathetic. There are, as a matter of fact, only a few characters in the play that do not, at one time or another, arouse the keen resentment of the spectator by a persistent dedication of their lives to an attitude of defiance, recrimination and the exquisitely torturing subtleties of petty revenge."

The central character is Julie, born to wealth and an aristocratic heritage. Julie is a headstrong and deliberate rebel against all of the gracious social usages to which she has been bred. She flouts convention and challenges any attempted curb upon her independent and imperious determination to "live her own life." Her own life eventually is blasted by the very tenacity of her adherence to false values and the futile belief that her whims must govern the lives of all about her.

Redolent of "Old South."

The etching of this character is set off by a background of opulent life in the Old South, redolent of the day when gentlemen faced each other with pistols at dawn and ladies observed the proprieties with punctilious regard for tradition and great charm—all but Julie. Shattered romances, cruel drawing-room intrigue, death and plague mark the progress of the stirring, but gloomy, tale that Owen Davis, Sr., evolved from the records of the yellow fever pestilence in the South in 1852.

The climax of the play is reached with the terrorizing striking of the epidemic of "yellow jack" that took a toll of almost 8,000 lives almost within the twinkling of an eye. It is this ravage of a dread disease that finally strikes the one she loves, but has lost to the simpler charms of a Northerner, which brings Julie to the point of a completely sacrificial repentance for all of the contemptible things she has one. It is only in the final few feet of the film that one begins to realize that perhaps here, after all, was a character of Spartan courage and a tremendous capacity to love. The revelation comes a little too late to ensconce Julie safely in the sympathy and understanding of an audience.

In the title role, Bette Davis proves her right to a place among the cinema's foremost actresses by effectively submerging her New England origin in a role that she makes vitally a part of the life of the Deep South in a distant day. Her performance is marked by a fine integrity to the sinister demands of a character that lacks most of the attributes that usually command admiration. Miss Davis leads the cast in a splendid disregard of those qualities of portrayal that might lead to great personal aggrandizement. The play seems to be the thing in the view of all concerned in its interpretation.

Henry Fonda and George Brent are cast in the pivotal male roles, with Richard Cromwell, Donald Crisp and John Litel offering excellent male support, and Fay Bainter, Spring Byington and Margaret Lindsay contributing their share to an especially distinguished ensemble

Music Is Effective.

The musical setting devised by Max Steiner, with occasional Negro spirituals introduced in the plantation scenes, adds immeasurably to the dramatic forcefulness of the picture. Its settings also are such as to arouse the enthusiasm of all who place any regard upon the artistic embellishment of a grimly realistic exposition of perverse human qualities.

"The Lawn Party Revue," conceived by Harry Anger as the stage portion of the new bill at the Earle, preserves the atmosphere of the major screen offering by largely duplicating its plantation setting. This interval of living entertainment is participated in by the Lathrop brothers and Virginia Lee, among the foremost of the more competent exponents of precision dancing; the Three Radio Rogues—Syd Chatton, Eddie Bartell and Jimmy Hollywood—in their familar imitations of the principal personalities of the airwaves; the Three Reddingtons, experts on the bounding mat; the Balabanows, in their "Mayfair Accordion Revue," and is headlined by the original "Aunt Jemima" (Tess Gardella), who still is a vocalist of the first rank and a "trucker" even beyond that.

The Paramount News and Joe Lombardi's orchestral contributions serve to round out a program that is notable for the willingness of its screen feature to ignore the elements of drama that usually strike closest to the human heart.

Collects Dogs.

Add Rhythm to Earle's Revue

LATHROP BROTHERS AND VIRGINIA LEE, billed as "tap dancers gone Park avenue," who return to the stage of the Earle Theater this week to lend the luster of their impeccable stepping to Harry Anger's "Lawn Party Revue," starring Aunt Jemima (Tess Gardella). This stage diversion preserves the atmosphere of "Jezebel," chief screen feature for the new week.

Walt Disney Feature Is in Its Seventh Week With New 'Time.'

Taking its undisputed place as foremost screen attraction ever to play RKO-Keith's Theater since its abandonment of the old B. F. Keith vaudeville policy, Walt Disney's Technicolor production, in cartoon form, of "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" yesterday entered its seventh consecutive week on Fifteenth street. Throughout this period attendance has been of record-breaking proportions.

Unique among feature releases, "Snow White" is a new form of cinematic entertainment that completely justifies the public enthusiasm it has aroused. In the shimmering beauty of its fantasy, the rousing quality of its musical embellishment, the high quality of humor that punctuates its most engaging scenes and the superlative use that has been made of natural color photography, this subject stands indisputably in an isolated class by itself. It has no counterpart in form or in its amazing ability to entertain all ages and all classes.

This fabulous Disney creation, for the seventh week of its runs, has as a companion attraction a new release of "The March of Time," which supplants the Dionne Quintupland" short-reel that was on view for a fortnight, with the famous Dionne "Quints" frolicking about before the cameras, indoors and out, at the tottering old age of 3½ years.

The new "March of Time," contrary to usual custom, embodies only two subjects of documentary comment.

The first bears the subtile of "Arms and the League" and consists of a vivid bit of camera reporting on the sacrifice of Great Britain's Anthony Eden and the turning point in an 18-year peace drama, with the world for a stage and its end possibly in war.

The second division of the film concerns "Brain Trust Island," impugned as one of the most unorthodox of all the New Deal experiments—the transformation of Florida's remote and bankrupt Key West into the Nation's first governmentally noted "hot spot."

The continuing bill at Keith's this week is completed by the "Pathe Parade." It should not be missed by anyone who wishes to be included in popular drawing room conversations for many months to come.

In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., March 25.—I was lucky the other night in drawing Richard Dix as my dinner companion at Tia and Harry Lachman's house. Harry's the well known director, and she's the party tosser. And in mulling over old times, I learned that Dix has been a star ever since he was 21. I laughed and said, "well, give." He replied, "you know, I'm somewhere in the forties, but most people think I ought to be in a wheel chair." I'd like you to know that he looks young enough to be his own son.

HEDDA HOPPER.

Unlike a number of men who've been on the screen for years, Dix is still playing romantic leads. He's doing one now in "Blind Alibi" with Whitney Bourne, New York sassity girl, playing opposite him, and another with Frances Mercer who'll make a name for herself when you see her in "Vivacious Lady" playing his sister.

I believe more women have attained fame while playing with Dix than with any other popular idol. If you don't believe me, cast your peepers over this list: Irene Dunne, Ann Harding, Jean Arthur, Rochelle Hudson, Bebe Daniels, June Collyer (now Mrs. Stu Erwin), Elizabeth Allen, Madge Evans, Karen Morley, Vera Engels, Eleanor Boardman, Esther Ralston, Nancy Carroll, Thelma Todd, and Lois Wilson.

Dix told me he had to take a trip to England to get over his fear. "Fear of what?" said I. "Fear of not being top dog in this village called Hollywood. Over there, standards are so different—and you have time to think. You can get a clearer perspective on life. The most important people there put on the smallest show." I agreed with him. He said, "My wife, who used to be my secretary, introduced me to her friends and they have taken me into their lives and homes, and treat me as an equal. And I was flattered when they asked me to help solve their problems. Then I knew I had achieved some understanding of life."

What a gathering of the clans at millionaire Len Hannah's house!! He scrambles stars, society, sirens, as we do eggs.

There were Liz Whitney and her distinguished mother, Mrs. Altemus, of Philadelphia, escorted by Bruce Cabot, Tia and Harry Lachman, Marta Abbe, Italy's first actress who played "Tovarich" in New York, and copped one of the first citizens of Cleveland for a husband, Severance Milliken. Peggy Fears, looking like a lady bullfighter without the bull. She introduced a new cocktail—gin, lemon juice and tomato juice. Looked deadly to me. Hope she's all right.

And Whitney Bourne wearing a magenta coat over hydrangea blue gown, so thin she made an entrance through the iron grill over the window. Sophie Tucker, Constance Collier, Heather Thatcher wearing his monocle, Edith Hughes signpost of Walt Disney Studios. She takes you there. Cesar Romero, most sought after rhumba partner in town, Virginia Fields, Alex Steinert, who conducted the orchestra for "Peggy and Bess" but had to wait six months for his union card in order to work here.

Eddy Duchin and Rex Evans took turns relieving the pianist engaged for the evening. Winsor French was all set up because Lucius Beebe called him "Mr. Malaprop, of Cleveland." His only regret—that he hadn't thought of it first. Earl of Warwick and Wright Ludington, Santa Barbara. And Bill Powell, who's about to edit a magazine called, "Epicure," introduced a dish named "Kedjere," which contained scallops, salmon, rice, curry, fried onions, chopped hard boiled eggs—and tasted as it looked, good.

Trans-Lux

Held over are the marvelously edited pictures of the German coup in Austria. The news features, of which there are 43, take up 45 minutes of the hour-and-fifteen-minute show. The gamut of emotions is run from first-hand information in the European crisis to Former President Herbert Hoover in Poland and the gorgeous cherry blossoms in the Nation's Capital. We have seen pictures of King George sitting in his grandfather's ancient auto, but at the Trans-Lux he is shown taking a ride in it. Cardinal Hayes makes his plea for peace and Lew Lehr outtalks a battle royal in the snow. Sport shots in the news bring in the Kentucky Derby favorites and the Harvard crew practice on the Charles River with the ice carnival opening in New York City.

The short subjects bring in another "Stranger Than Fiction" with everything from the largest saw mill in the world to a dog, a cat and two squirrels playing in perfect harmony.

The travelog for the week takes you into the Malayan jungle where thrilling and extremely interesting sights are disclosed in colors.

For laughs is "Comical Oddities of Ye Old Days" where you are tutored through the graveyards of New England and South Carolina and read some of the most unbelievable gravestones.

And, of course, there is a color Walt Disney cartoon, this time based upon Pluto and his quinpuplets.

Palace

Andrea Leeds, the Ritz Brothers, Adolphe Menjou, Kenny Baker, Bobby Clark, Ella Logan, Helen Jepson, Zorina, Charlie McCarthy and Edgar Bergen—although they ought to be reversed in order—Phil Baker, Jerome Cowan, Charles Kullman, Nydia Westman, Balanchine's American Ballet of the Metropolitan Opera Company and the "Goldwyn Girls"— in those names are to be found the genesis of "The Goldwyn Follies" genuine distinction as one of the most artistic musical screen productions of the year.

There is not a player in the cast of this extravagantly beautiful Technicolor production who does not rate top ranking in his or her chosen field. Take Helen Jepson, for instance. Here is one of the stars of the Metropolitan Opera, making her debut in pictures to the great solace of all who love good music. She is heard in two scenes from "La Traviata," with perfect voice recording and a degree of photographic beauty that places her immediately among the Hollywood "glamor girls"—save the mark.

Then there are the Ritz Brothers to offer low comedy contrasts to the more elegant qualities of Mr. Goldwyn's prize musical. As has been said here numerous times before, you either like the Ritz Brothers or you don't. It is to be doubted that they ever have been better on the screen than they are here. And Kenny Baker sings at his best, sharing romantic honors with Andrea Leeds and Adolphe Menjou. Charlie McCarthy and his vicarious voice, Edgar Bergen, Phil Baker and the incomparable Zorina add still further to the charm of this opulent display of the cinema's better side.

And there you have it—a glittering revelation of the beauty of which the screen is capable, an eminent disclosure of talents that long have been recognized and a shrewd welding of diverse elements of light entertainment that no one but Sam Goldwyn ever before has dared combine in a single picture.

It is no wonder that "The Goldwyn Follies" is being held over a second week at Loew's Palace Theater, or that the supplementary attractions—although they may seem to be unimportant—also are being retained. It is an ace program.

Metropolitan

Well, this is certainly different. It may be repeating a downtown run, but that is all that's repetitious about it. It has some pretty new ideas (we mean pretty "new," not pretty "ideas").

If you have a strong constitution and a fondness for Damon Runyon's whimsy, "A Slight Case of Murder" will probably get a good many laughs out of you—most of them through its shock technique.

We don't think murder is terribly funny, even so "slight" a case as here shown—four on one round of bullets! But even we enjoyed Remy Marco's new parlor game of "What to Do With the 'Stiffs'?" He and his boys have such fun distributing them on enemies' doorsteps and front lawns, only to learn that they are worth $10,000 per—dead or alive.

Remy Marco, in case you didn't meet him his first week in town, is the rum-running czar who turns legit with a vengeance come prohibition, and starts to lose money immediately. In addition to his minor worry over the four murders which he didn't commit, he has such major problems as a mortgage on his brewery and a daughter in love with a cop.

The picture starts slowly, but once well into its slightly macabre tale, moves with fine frenzy, spoiled somewhat by several much too broadly played roles. After all, it's subtle humor. A deal of its footage doesn't quite come off, but every once in a while there is a beautiful sock of laughter. Runyon and Lindsay must have had fun concocting the play.

Edward G. Robinson is swell as Remy. Harold Huber, Allen Jenkins, and Ed Brophy are very charming guys, particularly Huber. One of the "Dead End" kids plays in the height of the deadpan tradition. Ruth Bryan adds a touch of sense, and Ruth Donnelly, although one of those guilty of overplaying, does very well, indeed, in the more important moments. The fifth gangster, who takes such elegant care of his friends, is certainly a demon shot.

This Morning

Musings of a Pitcher Standing on Slab.

By Shirley Povich.

Orlando, Fla.

And today, my little dumplings, we will read the thoughts of most any American League pitcher as he stands out there on the mound ready to go into his windup—against the Detroit Tigers, for instance.

POVICH.

We'll imagine that Jo-Jo White, the Tigers' lead-off man, is up there awaiting the pitch. And if the pitcher is thinking at all, he's thinking along lines like these:

"If this guy gets a hit off me, it's my own fault. If he didn't choke up on that bat, he wouldn't hit .122. I know he's up there praying for a walk. Make him hit it, but don't give him anything good. The way he's standing up there he ought to be a sucker for a fast one, outside. Anyway, I don't want him on base, not with his speed. Make him foul off the first one. Get him in a hole, and don't give him anything fat. Keep it a bit high, too, so he won't bunt. I don't want him dragging one. At least here's one guy who won't knock it over the fence."

* * * *

You may draw your own conclusions as to what happened to White, but we must hasten along to the next Tiger hitter, who happens to be Pete Fox. And it's 10 to 1 the pitcher is regarding Fox in this way:

"Nothing inside to this guy, or he'll pull it into rightfield like a bullet. I know. He'll hit anything that's fast and inside. Slow up on him, that's the thing to do. give him the curve by the change of pace—outside. I wish my curve was working better, though. This guy has a habit of taking the first pitch so perhaps I'd better try to slip a fast one past him. Why doesn't he take his eyes off me, the fool. A batter shouldn't like that, it doesn't help him any. He ought to relax, but I hope he doesn't."

* * * *

Our guess is that Fox, a pretty fair hitter, didn't disgrace himself in any event, but look whose up next—Charley Gehringer. If Friend Pitcher is sound of mind, these are doubtless his thoughts:

"This guy always hits me as if he owns me. Look at him now, bat ready and waiting for the first pitch that looks half decent—only half decent, mind you. But he won't get any low ball inside, I can tell you that. He's been socking that kind against the fences for years. That's where his power is. Maybe I'd better try a change of pace, to the outside corner, if I can. But nothing fast and down the middle, or he may blast my head off. I threw him a baseball last month and it came back to me a bullet. Wish I was a left-hander and had Gomez's fast curve—or Grove's. Oh, well."

* * * *

The presumption is that Friend Pitcher didn't exactly make a fool out of Gehringer, who happens to be the American League batting champion, so we skip lightly to the next hitter, who happens to be Hank Greenberg.

"If this guy is a guess hitter as they say, he must be the seventh son of a seventh son, 'cause he sure guesses right too many times. Nothing too good for him, if I can help it. At least it won't go out of the park if I don't throw him an inside ball. Might dust him off, but that would be wasting a pitch. Can't afford to get in a hole against him. If he rolls up the count on me and I have to put it over and he knows what's coming, I'll be in a heluva mess. Make him reach, and lunge for the ball. Funny, he likes to do that, even though he shouldn't. Well, here goes. . . ."

Which brings Rudy York to the plate and adds little, if anything, to the comfort of the fellow on the mound, if, indeed, he is still out there pitching after what Greenberg might have accomplished. Anyway, the pitcher out there is thinking thusly, or he's not thinking correctly.

"Where do the Tigers get all these big guys? This York is plain murder. He'll hit 'em farther than Greenberg. Good form, too, for a guy who just broke in. He's relaxed, too, with that little crouch of his. Can't pitch too fine to him and get in a hole. Wish I had Mel Harder's sinker. I'd keep it low and outside and probably get away with it. But he don't know what I'm going to throw yet and I think he's a guess hitter. Well, let him try to guess this one . . ."

* * * *

Your guess is as good as ours to how our pitcher fared with York, but if the same pitcher is still in there, he is due for a bit of a breathing spell, because here

$891.60 Is Paid On Daily Double

New Orleans, March 25 (AP).—Bosto, W. W. Gauthier's three-year old gelding which won only two previous races in his career, took the featured sixth race at the Fair Grounds today to gain his first triumph of the 1938 season.

Laden with only 93 pounds, Bosto, came fast through the stretch to beat out P. Andolino's five-year-old Chancer which had set the pace from the start. Chancer outlasted Mrs. Kirby Ramsey's Fly Ahead to take the place.

Bosto, ridden by H. Krovitz, ran the mile and 70 yards in 1:43 1-5 and returned $8.20 on a $2 ticket.

Armstrong Beats Zivic.

Detroit, March 25 (U.P.).—Henry Armstrong, world featherweight boxing champion, tonight added Eddie Zivic, of Pittsburgh, to his long list of victims, scoring a technical knockout in the fourth round of a scheduled ten-round, nontitle bout.

District Girl 3-2 Winner At Augusta

Helen Dettweiler Defeats Jean Bauer; Long Drives Aid Her.

Augusta, Ga., March 25 (AP).—Blonde Helen Dettweiler, of Washington, D. C., won the eighth annual Augusta woman's golf tournament today, defeating Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., 3 and 2. She ended the match on the sixteenth after making the turn two up.

Miss Dettweiler, who conquered Mrs. Warren W. Beard, of Boston, the medalist, in the semifinals, clipped two strokes from woman's par with an outgoing 39. Miss Bauer, winner of the tournament in 1934, needed 42 strokes.

Story in Figures.

Their cards and woman's par for the 6,413-yard course:

Dettweiler (out)	5 6 4 3 5 5 3 5 5—41
Bauer (out)	5 6 5 3 5 6 4 4 5—43
Par (out)	5 5 4 3 5 5 4 5 5—41
Dettweiler (in)	5 5 4 3 4 4 3 x x
Bauer (in)	5 5 5 2 5 4 3 x x
Par (in)	5 5 4 3 4 4 3 x x

As the above statistical array will attest, the hard-driving Washington girl walked arm in arm with Old Man Par all afternoon. Except for the long second, where she went one over due to shaky approach work, Miss Dettweiler duplicated the card at every turn. And was so impressive in doing her chores that few in the huge gallery had trouble figuring out what happened in Aiken exactly one week ago, when the Washington girl teamed with Kathryn Hemphill, of Columbia, S. C., to win the championship of the round robin tournament.

Outdrives Her Foe.

Hitting the ball better than at any time since she came to Augusta several months ago, Miss Dettweiler invariably sent her tee shots from 25 to 50 yards in front of Miss Bauer's best. Once, on the second, she was a good 270 yards off the tee.

Aside from that, Helen was great shakes at putting today. Downhill, uphill, or any old way, Helen could make them drop with monotonous regularity. But, oddly enough, it was the explosion shot she executed on the sixteenth that caught the fancy of the crowd. Well trapped on the same hole the great Bobby Jones found disaster—laden on the final day of the Southeasten Open of 1930, at which time he used up seven strokes before holing out, the new Augusta woman's champion exploded to within eight feet of the pin and was down in one putt.

Devitt Wins Mat Crown

Capturing eight individual championships, Devitt Prep School's wrestling team won the District Junior A. A. U championship last night, nosing out a surprisingly strong Y. M. C. A. team, 78 to 71. The five other contenders were far behind.

Police Boys Club No. 5 was third with 15 points, followed in order by Police No. 4, 11; Police No. 10, 9; Georgetown Boys Club, 3, and Boys Club of Washington. 3.

Calvin Benedict's victory over Bill Shepard in the 109 pound division, Class B, and Pritchett's triumph over Dixon in the 145 pound division, Class C, featured.

Center Meet In Semifinals

The semifinal round in the Community Center city-wide basketball tournament will be played at Tech High tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

To reach the last four, Plaza downed Sigma Mu Sigma, 35 to 28; Miller defeated Bliss Electrical School, 32 to 23, and Mount Vernon nosed out American Railways, 35 to 33. Roosevelt Boys Club, the youngest team, is the only runner-up to reach the semifinal. It did so by grabbing the decision from Trinity Methodist, 25 to 23, and Bell Clothiers, 25 to 21.

Griffith's New Catcher

Battleship, Virginia Bred, Wins the Grand National

By the Associated Press.

Aintree, England, March 25.—Running on his heart with a 17-year-old kid on his back, Battleship today won an heroic "all-America" victory in the 100th Grand National Steeplechase to take a place alongside War Admiral as a worthy son of mighty Man o' War.

They said he'd sink in Becher's Brook. They said he was a pony out of his class. They started him at 40-1. Yet he carried the rose and silver colors of Mrs. Marion du Pont Scott, of Montpelier, Va., wife of the screen actor, Randolph Scott, near the front all the way.

He stepped in command the second time over Becher's Brook, slipped back and then came again. He was beaten at the last fence by a half-length, but he answered the whip and won by a head from H. C. McNally's Royal Danieli, on 18-to-1 shot. Sir Alex MacGuire's Workman was far back for third place in the field of 36.

The kid on Battleship's back was Bruce Hobbs, little American-born apple-cheeked boy who was raised in a grain box. His father trained Battleship and two weeks ago decided the boy should ride him. That decision won the race. For this youngster, who was taken to England at the age of 2 after his father had handled F. Ambrose Clark's horses at Westbury, Long Island, for 20 years, made his mistakes, mastered them and then whipped his mount home like a veteran twice his years.

There are a lot of "firsts" to report about this race, witnessed by a crowd estimated at 250,000. It was the first time a father-son, trainer-jockey combination had produced a winner. In 1935, however, Reynoldstown was owned by Maj. Noel Furlong and ridden to victory by his son, Frank. It was the first time a horse actually bred and raced

Vic Ghezzi's 279 Takes North-South

By the United Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 25.—Victor Ghezzi, The Deal, N. J. professional, won the 1938 North-and-South Open golf championship late today with a 72-hole score of 279, nine under par for the deceptive Pinehurst No. 2 course.

Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., one of the last to finish today's 36-hole final round, brought in a 285 which placed him second.

Horton Smith, of Chicago, defending champion, ended in a three-way tie for third place with Ed Dudley, Augusta, Ga., and Byron Nelson, Reading, Pa., at 286. Dudley and Nelson tied on every 18-hole division of the tournament, each carding 69-72-71-74.

Deadly accurate approach shots and putting carried Ghezzi through to the $1,000 championship. He dropped in a 30-foot putt on the fourth hole of this afternoon's round. This seventh-hole drive went into the woods, but he recouped on the next shot and landed on the green. Another good approach on the sixteenth narrowly cleared a bunker and stopped 2 feet from the flag.

Richard Chapman, Greenwich, Conn., turned in the low amateur score of 309. Frank Strafaci, Brooklyn amateur, and Leo Walper, Washington pro, were disqualified for allegedly misrepresenting their score on one hole.

Second place paid Runyan $600. Smith, Dudley and Nelson divided third, fourth and fifth place money, taking $400 each. Other leading finishers included:

Mel Almada Hits Homer And Double

Dutch Shows Fine Form Against Columbus; Gives 4 Hits.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 25.—Emil (Dutch) Leonard, the mountainous proprietor of the knuckle ball, pitched five innings of sunshine into the life of Manager Bucky Harris this hot, steaming afternoon.

It had threatened to be an extremely unhappy session for Harris today as he sent his Nats against the Columbus Red Birds and then watched his pet rookie lefthander, Joe Krahauskas, walk everybody but the Columbus bat boy. It was the second successive failure for the hog-wild Krakauskas, and Harris was being annoyed no end by the proceedings.

And then, in the fifth inning, big Leonard strode on the scene. And his was a superb performance, and the Nats won, 11 to 2, and Harris is visioning Leonard as a distinct asset to the Washington pitching staff.

The big Belgian yielded up only four hits in holding the Cardinal farmhands scoreless in those last five innings, but of these hits one was a spotty infield affair. The contrast with Krahauskas' horrible pitching was all the more refreshing, inasmuch as Leonard walked nobody at all.

Red Birds Dazzled.

Indeed, only one Columbus player reached second base legitimately against Leonard; who was using his knuckle ball with devastating effect. His pitches were literally fluttering up to the plate, and the Red Birds were swinging their bats in great amazement as the ball did its dipsy-do stuff.

The only thing sensational Krakauskas' pitching was the fact that the Red Birds made only two runs against him. They had plenty of encouragement. He walked two men in the first inning and he walked three in the second. And he walked four in the third, forcing in a run. In that third inning, the Red Birds were taking their base from force of habit.

Three Young Columbus pitchers gave up 10 hits to the Nats who crashed through in the third inning to tie the score at 2-2 and then kept scoring runs off and on. They splurged in the fourth against the left-handed Bill Seinsoth and accumulated three runs but they saved their grand festivities for the sixth when they knocked young Red Lynn loose from five runs.

Almada Stars at Bat.

Jimmy Wasdell made only one hit today, but it was a fair sort of swat. In fact, it was a home run that soared far, far over the right fielder's head and drove home two pals who happened to be on base in front of Wasdell.

But the slugging hero of the day was Mexican Mel Almada who, in three times at bat, mooched a walk, belted a homer into right field and then topped off his efforts with a lengthy double over the center fielder's head.

Johnny Stone, the perennial leader of the Nats' hitting force in the spring, can't buy a hit this year. He has made only one safe blow in the Nats' seven exhibition games.

It wasn't much of a Columbus team that the Nats beat today. They were the fellows who apparently weren't deemed worthy of a tryout with the Cardinals. Columbus' 1938 team will begin to take shape when the Cardinals start shipping back talent they drafted from their farm club.

Young Buddy Lewis is a worried young man with the Nats. The pulled muscle in his thigh is still a painful injury, and he is beginning to wonder when he will be able to play in a ball game. He begged off today, when scheduled to appear in the line-up.

The Nats will be host to the Kansas City Blues tomorrow at Tinker Field, and will be seeking their third straight victory against American Association clubs. Ray Phebus, Wes Ferrell atnd Early Wynn are slated as Harris' pitchers.

ZekeBonuraReady To Play; Will See Action on Sunday

Orlando, Fla., March 25.—Henry John (Zeke) Bonura, who has been watching with envy as the Nats have been assaulting enemy pitching for the last two days, today told Manager Bucky Harris that he is ready to play.

Bonura has been in training only four days with the Nats, but declares he is virtually down to weight and wants to start swinging his big bat. Harris is expected to give him his first chance in a Washington uniform on Sunday when the Nats play the Braves at Bradenton.

Boston Red Sox Sign Norton, U. of Maryland's Ace Hurler

Husky Right-Hander Quits School, Will Report to Rocky Mount Club April 1.

Charley Norton, husky niversity of Maryland athlete, has signed a contract with the Boston Red Sox and will report to the Rocky Mount, Piedmont League, farm of that club, April 1, it was learned last night. He is a pitcher.

Acclaimed as prospectively the greatest all-around athlete ever enrolled at Maryland, Norton withdrew from school several weeks ago after failing to be restored to good scholastic standing and made eligible for baseball. He failed to pass the mid-term examinations and would have been ineligible to compete in intercollegiate sports until next September.

Hailing from Salt Lake City, Utah, weighing 190 pounds and unusually fast for his size, Norton starred in three sports as a freshman, but did not play football as a sophomore on the advice of major league baseball scouts who considered him an excellent pitching prospect. He was a triple-threat halfback in football, and a center, and the team's most prolific scorer in basketball. This morning he will pitch for the "Yannigans" in a practice game with the varsity nine.

Norton originally intended to work during the summer months, playing sandlot baseball on the side, and save enough money to re-enroll at Maryland next autumn. He had informed friends he would play all sports next year. A local brewery, which sponsors a baseball team, offered him a position and he was to have started work Monday morning, but the Red Sox offer, received in the meanwhile, was too attractive to decline.

The lad's scholastic difficulties, according to school officials, did not arise from his inability to grasp the work, but because of a tendency to "cut" too many classes. His marks for the first two semesters were above par and his attendance good. The latter fell off in the succeeding semester, however, and he was suspended from athletics.

Norton is not expected to return to school next year after signing the Red Sox contract. He is the second Maryland player to leave the campus and join a professional team. Charley Keller went to training camp with the Newark Bears last season and was a sensation in his first year with that club, leading the International League in batting. He returned last autumn to complete work for his degree, however, and was graduated in February.

Platak Plays For 4th Title

Faces Coast Player in Handball Finals.

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., March 25.—A 27-year-old Californian fought his way through to a crack at the National A. A. U. handball title today in a sensational semifinals rally that eclipsed anything ever seen on a Memphis court.

Wearing the colors of San Francisco's Olympic Club, lithe Jack Clements used a 9-year-age advantage and a barrage of deadly kills and placements to pound out a three-game, 15—21, 21—20, 21—17, victory over 36-year-old Sam Atcheson, Memphis, former National A. A. U. titleholder, and clear the way for a finals match with Defending Champion Joe Plattak.

Atcheson jumped off to a 21-to-15 victory in the opening game, then went to lead, 20 to 16, in the second. Clements broke through the veteran's service and ran up 4 straight points to deadlock the game at 20-all. Again the Californian halted Atcheson's service. Atcheson returned Clements' service, who pounded the ball down the sidewall for point and game.

The Memphian led 10-4 in the third and deciding game, but tired rapidly. Placing his shots with uncanny accuracy, Clements crept up to a 13-10 advantage, and then "ran out" on Atcheson to win 21-17.

Joe Platak, Chicago, gunning for his fourth consecutive A. A. U. title, coasted through his semifinal match, to a win over Jack Srenco, St. Louis. The scores were 21—14, 21—3. Platak and Clements meet for the title tomorrow.

Srenco took an early lead in the first game, but wilted when the champion opened up with an attack which drove him to all corners of the court.

Two Horses Favored In Louisiana Derby

New Orleans, March 25 (U.P.).—Bourbon King and Sir Raleigh tonight were favorites among ten virtually certain starters in the seventeenth running of the $12,000 added Louisiana Derby Sunday.

The two favorites were assigned 119 pounds each for the mile and one-eighth test for 3-year-olds.

Tigers Beat Swim Mark

New Brunswick, N. J., March 25 (AP).—Princeton's great trio of Al Vande Weghe, Dick Hough and Hank Van Oss broke the listed American record tonight in capturing the 300 yard medley relay at the National Collegiate A. A. Swimming championships.

Vande Weghe, great backstroker, gave Hough a substantial lead in the breast stroke leg and the husky Tiger was far in the van when Van Oss started the final free style leg of the journey through Rutgers pool.

Their time was 2 minutes 54 and seven-tenths seconds, beating by two-tenths of a second the listed American mark of the Lake Shore A. C. The national intercollegiate mark of 2:57, made last year by Harvard and the N. C. A. A. meet standard of 2:57.8 set last year by Michigan was also erased. Ohio State trailed the Tigers, with Michigan third.

At the end of the first day's competition, Ohio State led with 22 points to 20 for Michigan's defending champions.

Princeton and Harvard tied for third with 16 points each. Other team scores, Yale, 11; Iowa, 6; Texas, 4; Stanford, 4; Illinois, 3; Southern California, 3; Army, 2; Minnesota, Pittsburgh, and Rutgers, one each.

Timed in 1:34.2, Vande Weghe clipped more than two seconds off the listed national intercollegiate record of 1:36.7 and the meet mark of 1:36.8, established respectively by Wiliam Neunzig of Ohio State and Danny Zehr, of Northwestern.

Ring Fans Will Have Chance to Size Up Sciebelli Today

Whether Johnny Sciebelli can throw a punch, block one, move around, box well and do a hundred other things a good ring general is supposed to do will be determined this afternoon when the Brooklyn bantam appears for a public workout at 2 o'clock at the Huron gym.

If he can't, it looks like another victory for Joey Archibald when they meet Monday night; but if he can, Mr. Archibald may find himself involved in a hotter argument than he bargained for.

While Archibald already has been installed a favorite, and is being quoted as high as 9-5 along Larrup Lane, there are a few suspicious souls who want a peek at Sciebelli before laying their hard earned money on the line. To many of them the Franco-Italian looks like a good proposition—if he measures up to advance notices.

They base their argument on the fact that Archibald may find the going a lot tougher campaigning among legitimate bantams for several good reasons. The most important is speed. Can Archibald tag the smaller fellows as easily as he did featherweights and junior lightweights, and, if he can will his blows have the same stunning effect? No, say the unbelievers, and furthermore, a smart, fast boxer will give Joey no end of trouble offensively.

Archibald starts slowly, feeling out his man, figuring the best style of punching to use against him, and this may not work out well against Sciebelli if the latter is up to par. Sciebelli comes in with both arms tossing leather, a la Henry Armstrong. Hence, if he keeps Archibald on the defensive in the earlier stages of the fight Joey will not have time—as in past bouts—to figure out a battle plan.

Archibald is not a one-punch killer He needs to land several good wallops to a vital sector to get a man down, and this, too, will be to his disadvantage for Sciebelli fights harder when stung. Archibald doesn't like to be on the receiving end of a body attack too much, and Sciebelli's specialty is in-fighting. If he can get inside often enough he will give the Providence boy an uncomfortable evening.

This is all conjectural, of course, for nobody knows how Archibald will handle the situation of Sciebelli is as rugged as his reputation. The workout will reveal a number of interesting items and give the fans more than an inkling as to what will happen when they actually get together.

The complete card announced yesterday finds Stumpy Jacobs, veteran Richmond lightweight, pitted against Bill Temes in a six-rounder. Jacobs, essaying a comeback, knocked out Lou Jallos, Joey Green and Leroy Zinkham in his last three starts.

Little Al Dintaman, a local and popular flyweight, tangles with Chester Rubey in a four, while Johnny Gilley faces Benny Castle in another four. They are featherweights. A heavyweight bout involving Murray Kenner and Nick Ruben was announced previously.

Black River Scores In Tropical Feature, Paying $4.60 Ticket

Defeats Joyride and Sunphantom to Register Second Straight Victory; Spill Marks Race, None Hurt.

By the Associated Press.

Tropical Park, Fla., March 25.—Black River, consistent 6-year-old sprinter representing Mrs. R. Sullivan, raced to his second score in a row when he defeated a field of $4,500 top and $4,000 bottom platers in the 6-furlong Daytona Purse here this afternoon. Irving Anderson drove the brown veteran past the wire ahead before C. W. Fershall's Improved Joyride. Mrs. C. S. Bromley's Sunphantom was beaten a length and a half for the place.

Black River, a horse that rarely finishes out of the picture, carried 118 pounds, which included Irving Anderson, and completed his rigorous journey in 1:11 2-5 over a good track. He was a $4.60 for $2 choice in the field of seven.

A mishap occurred near the three-eighths pole. Victorious Ann tried to prop, stumbled and unseated Carroll Bierman. The jockey, who is riding in top form at present, was not injured. Victorious Ann appeared to favor her right foreleg and may have injured her shoulder. The horse and rider were clear of other horses at the time.

Black River, which usually comes from behind, had plenty of foot today. He dashed to the front at the break and disposed of Sorceress in short order. Then Joyride spurted leaving the far side and Anderson eased back slightly to let the long shot make the running. Closing steadily on the outside in the stretch, Black River wore down his rival and won going away. Sunphantom raced well up from the start and easily saved the show.

Robert S. Wins.

Two-year-old maiden fillies provided the sport as today's card opened with a 4-furlong dash. W. H. Gallagher's Dark Sweet, paying the remunerative odds of $14.30 for $2, was a handy winner with a length and a half to spare over Layover, while the latter beat Dogrose, the favorite, by a neck. Dark Sweet broke fast from an outside post position and quickly dashed into the clear, holding sway without being menaced. Dogrose was carried wide by Layover, which ruined her winning chances. Over a track that was drying out in good order, the winner finished in 0:47 4-5.

The talent collected in the second race when Robert S., well handled by Carroll Bierman, came along on the outside of the pacemaking Cosmic Ray and clicked by a half length to pay $5.30. Cosmic Ray recently was reinstated by the stewards after being barred because he bled. A veterinarian's certificate showed the gelding fit to race. He stole a wide lead, then stopped in the final drive. Come Home was third, three lengths behind.

The lightly backed Woodsia, under one of Ken McCombs' powerful rides, outlasted Town Car, the choice, by a half length to account for the third purse. Taxi, a long shot, missed second money by three lengths. Rushing to the front on the inside rail, Woodsia, a $20.80 for $2 hazard, first had to shake off Noajean before hooking up with Town Car. The daughter of Rolled Stocking held her ground with admirable courage in a long, exciting duel from the top of the stretch home.

Brogan Pays $21.70.

Brogan, a black colt flying the green, white and gold silks of W. V. Dwyer, managing director of the Cables Racing Association, led all the way in the fourth race to return $21.70 for a $2 straight ticket. Laconic supplied the chief contention after the first quarter mile, but Jockey R. Donoso rode out Brogan to register by a length. Joe D., the one to force the early pace, held on gamely and landed the show, slightly less than a length farther back.

Carroll Bierman, none the worse for his spill in the feature event, came back in the sixth contest to drive Conrad Mann first home in a blanket finish. Sir Reg was beaten by a nose while heading Breezing along for the place. The confidently played Copper Tube could not beat a horse, showing a miserable effort under Johnny Barba. The leaders were bunch to the top of the stretch, where Conrad Mann, on the outside, drew up to virtually even terms with Sir Reg and Breezing along. It was a thrilling drive through the stretch, with Bierman pushing his mount's nose to the front to score a double. Conrad Mann returned $13.40.

Showing a brand of speed that was missing in his last three starts here, Hypo won the seventh race under the veteran Johnny Leland and paid $51.70 for $2. Although beaten off in his recent outing, Hypo had the speed of the field today.

DARK SWEET, away forwardly, drew clear in the early running under vigorous pressure and held sway in the final furlong. ROBERT S., well handled, followed the leader lightly restrained until straightened into the stretch, closed with determination on the outside when placed to a drive, wore the leader down and won going away. COSMIC RAY began fast and, showing good speed, opened up a big gap in the first half mile, but faltered when the real issue came. COME HOME gradually improved his position between the leaders rounding the turn and disposed of HORNET in the last furlong.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WOODSIA, $20.80, $8.00, $5.60; TOWN CAR, $4.40, $3.80; TAXI, $13.90.

WOODSIA moved to the front rapidly while obtaining clear passage in the run down the backstretch, then rated while rounding the turn, had something in reserve when put to a drive and outlasted TOWN CAR. The latter broke forwardly, went well up on the outside all the way and finished gamely, but McCombs outrode Hartle when it came to a finish. TAXI on the inside and saving ground for the entire trip, held on with good courage in the stretch drive to outstay COUNTRY LASS.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:47. Off 3:48½. Winner, W. V. Dwyer's blk. c. (3), by Sun Mission—Dash. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BROGAN, $21.70, $10.80, $5.30; LACONIC, $6.90, $4.90; JOE D., $5.10.

BROGAN held his opposition safe for speed, shook off his opposition leaving the backstretch and responded gamely to strong pressure and maintained his advantage to the end. LACONIC, under extreme pressure from the start, worked his way forwardly while saving much ground, but was unable to overtake the winner. JOE D., a forward factor on the inside for the entire trip, closed stoutly through the stretch and held the others safe. RICH CREAM and ROMAN PRIDE were never able to reach prominent positions.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. The Daytona. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:16. Off 4:18. Winner, Mrs. R. Sullivan's br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLACK RIVER, $4.60, $3.70, $2.90; JOYRIDE, $9.20, $5.50; SUNPHANTOM, $3.40.

BLACK RIVER outbroke the field and, going in close attendance of the pace throughout while racing on the outside, finished gamely to punishment when the final test came and wore JOYRIDE down in the closing strides. JOYRIDE, hurried from the start, assumed a clear lead entering the stretch, but then faltered in the final drive. SUNPHANTOM, prominent all the way, made a game effort through the stretch, but could not keep pace with the leaders. MANSCO finished stoutly from a slow beginning. MARSON and SORCERESS faltered in the last furlong. VICTORIOUS ANN went lame leaving the backstretch and stumbled rounding the turn and unseated her rider.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:46. Off 4:46. Winner, Fanfair Farm's b. or br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CONRAD MANN, $13.40, $6.40, $3.70; SIR REG, $6.30, $3.40; BREEZING ALONG, $3.00.

CONRAD MANN followed the pace under stout restraint until midway down the backstretch, moved up gradually on the extreme outside, closed determinedly when the final issue came and outlasted his opponents. SIR REG displayed good speed and raced EXHIBITOR into defeat in the first half mile, made a courageous effort when placed to a drive, but could not stave off the winner. BREEZING ALONG, keen contender from the start, held on with good courage in the stretch drive. MORE PEP, taken back off the early pace, moved up with a rush entering the stretch, but was blocked a sixteenth mile out while attempting to steal through on the inside. COPPER TUBE lacked speed and was badly outrun for the entire trip.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:13. Off 5:13. Winner, Mrs. J. M. Garrity's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HYPO, $51.70, $15.10, $5.80; YENOC, $3.90, $2.90; PEPPER PATCH, $3.80.

HYPO, going in suddenly improved form, set a steady early pace and raced BERNARDINE W. into submission in the early running, opened up a winning lead on the stretch turn, but then began to falter in the final sixteenth mile and just lasted long enough to withstand YENOC'S challenge. YENOC, in a forward position all the way, came around to the leader in the last furlong, gained steadily under punishment and would have won in a few more strides. PEPPER PATCH, vigorously ridden in the final half mile, closed stoutly on the outside and disposed of BERNARDINE W. PEACEFUL, slow to get going, finished stoutly.

EIGHTH RACE—One mile and 60 yards. Purse, $900; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:44. Off 5:45. Winner, Cosgrave Stable's blk. or br. g. SCUDDER, much the best, drew out into a commanding lead in the early stages at his leisure and won as his rider pleased. RAVENNA, well up the entire trip, finished gamely to punishment, but never threatened the winner. JUB JUB, nearest in pursuit of the leader in the first half mile, faltered thereafter, yet outlasted STILL ALARM.

The Post's All Outdoors Editor.

Local Ike Waltons were in turmoil yesterday, caused by the receipt of letters from the Maryland Conservation Commission in answer to their applications for reservations to fish the Hunting Creek controlled stream project, saying that it had been stopped by the U. S. Park Service.

ACKERMAN.

Fishermen had noted that the stream had already been heavily stocked, that it would be open on Friday, April 1, with no restrictions whatsoever.

That such an undertaking would be summarly dropped, by a Government agency that has done so much for the outdoorsman, without good reason, was hard to believe.

We find that the Catoctin recreational area was created for the underprivileged. The additional fee to be charged to pay patrolling wardens is very much out of line—in fact defeating the primary purpose of the park.

It is to be regretted that the best of the so few trout streams in the State of Maryland would have to be in this area, but there must be some way to jump such a small hurdle, so that anglers in this section might enjoy fishing like that in the Spring Creek project in Pennsylvania. That fishing attracts anglers from every State in the East.

As far as the Park Service is concerned, the subject isn't closed. We understand that with a reasonable presentation of the case, this project can still be completed. That means if anglers get the most out of the stream in the early season under controlled conditions, they should have it, but later it should be opened to every one.

There are few finer trout streams anywhere than Fishing Creek, on Catoctin Mountain in this same recreation area just above Frederick. Anglers from the whole Atlantic seaboard come to fish this beautiful water throughout the season. The State of Maryland stocks the crystal-clear, spring-cold pools and riffles annually with more than ten thousand adult trout. Recreationists, as well as the countryside drink of it.

Yet, enough overflow from the septic tanks of the close-by CCC camp is dumped into this creek, until certain sections of its banks stink to high heaven.

The commanding officer of the camp has promised correction. It is hoped it will not take the form of chlorination or other chemicals that would in all likelihood kill all life in the stream. The pipe laid to carry this overflow should be removed.

It hardly seems possible that a Government agency, se tup to improve the surrounding country, could be so blind as to permit such pollution, to build roads to an area, where the gem is ruined in the creation of the setting.

T. O. M. Sopwith tried twice, unsuccessfully, to take home to England the America's Cup, but it remained for one of his fishing companions, Capt. Edmund Tremayne, on the recent jaunt to the Canal Zone and the Perlas Islands, to lift at the first try one of our major fishing records.

Fishing off Postoffice Bay, Charles Island, for wahoo with a feather lure, he caught instead a sailfish (Pacific) weighing 190 pounds. The displaced world record holder for the species was Louis W. Meyers with the 182-pound sail he caught off Cape San Lucas, Mexico, in 1935.

A new Atlantic coastal record for white marlin was put on the books only last week. This week the 158-pounder taken by Carl Badenhausen on St. Patrick's Day at Bimini, British West Indies, approved as a new world's record; taking precedence over the 152-pound white marlin of Mrs. Marion Stevens, caught in 1936 at the same place.

And it displaces the one woman to hold a place in the ranks of the holders of world's sport fishing records.

Also on St. Patrick's Day at Bimini, was recorded the attack on a yacht, the Firelands, by a blue marlin. It drove 18 inches of its bill through the heavy double planking, missing a gas tank by inches.

All available records indicating it to be the first taken in Bahaman waters a thresher shark weighing 432 pounds was caught off Cat Cay by J. C. Stanley, of New York, after a battle of only 27 minutes.

The upper fork of the thresher's tail is greatly elongated, and with it they stun small fish, just as the huge sawfish do with their toothed bony bills. It is said to be second only to the mako in its proclivity for jumping.

Site Chosen Near Aldie For Events

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., March 25. The committee for the annual point-to-point races of the Middleburg Hunt, which will be held tomorrow, announced this evening that the starting place of the event would be at Seaton's Scales, which is located on land formerly a part of the Carter place and now owned by H. P. Metcalf. The finish also will be at the same place.

Seaton's Scales is situated near a secondary road leading from Aldie to Mountville, and is about 1½ miles from Aldie, and about 3½ miles from Middleburg.

The first race will be caled at 1 o'clock. This will be the lightweight division of the individual race. Eight entries have been made in this clas. Among these are Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Spar and Hopeful Jim, to be ridden by Mrs. James Hamilton and George Robert Slater. Billie Hulbert has entered My Lad, and Duncan Read will be up on Southwest II. Four others make up this class.

The middleweight has 12 entries with last year's division winner, Miss Nancy Hanna's Gone Away, going. Several other outstanding entries are Dave Odell's Clubman, and George L. Ohrstrom's Saratoga Maid, ridden by Fred Thomas, of Long Island. The heavyweight division has four entries. The pair race has four definite starters, Miss Barbara Iselin, Miss Laura Sprague, Duncan Read and Mrs. Silvie Hazard, and possibilities of Mrs. John Hinckley and Mrs. Edward Friendly.

The judges will be J. R. H. Alexander, Leesburg; Baldwin Spillman, Sterling Larrabee, Warrenton, and Frederick Prince, jr., Rectortown.

Seasoned hunters, hardened from long chases during a winter unusually good for fox hunting, will compete for the famous Middleburg Bowl, a handsome silver trophy, which will be given to the best hunter at the races. This coveted prize has been held during the past year by Mrs. Compton Smith, whose Marry Barry was judged the best hunter at the trials last spring.

Prizes will also be given in each of the individual events and the owners of the winning horses in the team race will be presented with silver plate.

Steve Casey Booked Here

Steve (Crusher) Casey, a broth of a lad from the Oul' Sod, will defend his world wrestling championship (Bowser circuit) against Gino Garibaldi in the feature bout Thursday night at Turner's Arena.

This will be the initial appearance here of the giant Irishman who won his laurels by throwing Lou Thesz, Danno O'Mahoney and all other title claimants. Garibaldi is well known here, despite the fact that he has not exhibited his wares in the District for some time.

The feature match will share interest with an added attraction involving Bob Gregory, European middle and cruiser weight champion, who matches holds with Tony Calasino, of Italy. Gregory is better known, perhaps, as the husband of Princess Baba, daughter of the White Rajah of Sarawak—whom he married against the Rajah's will.

Johnny Five Bows, 38-29, To Fenwick

District Quintet's Late Rally Is Nipped in Chicago Play.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Chicago, March 25.—St. John's Prep's bid for the National Catholic interscholastic basketball championship was firmly squelched here today as the Washington, D. C., champions fell before Fenwick High School, of Oak Park, Ill., 38-29. The defending champions took command of the situation early in the second period, and were never headed.

Off to an early 6-4 lead in the first quarter, the Cadets faltered badly in the second and third periods, and were unable to overtake their rivals despite a brilliant last-period rally. Fenwick pulled up at halftime with a comfortable 16-8 advantage, and led by 29-17 going into the final quarter.

The District of Columbia champions evidently did not hit their true stride until near the game's end, and it was too late then. Fenwick, meanwhile, played a steady game, exhibiting a smooth brand of passing and accurate scoring. The defending champions took no chances, but worked the ball in close to the backboard for the majority of their shots.

St. John's play was spotty throughout the first three periods, and strict officiating did not help it. No less than 13 fouls were charged against the Eastern club, three each on Mulvihill, Giebel, Gallagher, and Swagart, and one on Battiste. Fenwick cashed in on 10 free throws, and their proximity to the four-fouls limit hampered the above players considerably.

But they cast caution to the winds in the last period and effected a complete change in the trend of the contest. Swagart located the hoop twice with long shots; Giebel pocketed two snowbirds, and Battiste, with Gallagher, followed with one each. The rally failed to disturb Fenwick, however, as the timer's whistle abruptly terminated the scoring spree.

Coach Gene Augusterfer of St. John's used only five men throughout, while Fenwick made only one substitution. St. John's was weak in the free throw lane, sinking only three of its eight attempts.

The defeat automatically eliminates the Washington team from all competition, for only teams that lost their first round games are eligible for the consolation round. St. John's, however, will not depart for home until Sunday afternoon, and will spend Saturday and Sunday sightseeing and being entertained.

G. W., Hoya Grid Teams Scrimmage

Joint Workout Is Held on Latter's Field; 2 Players Hurt.

The latest inkling that Georgetown and George Washington Universities are quickly approaching a more friendly athletic relationship was given yesterday when football squads of the two colleges met in an infomal scrimmage on the Hoyas' practice field.

Although Hoya and Colonial basketball teams have been practicing together for two years, yesterday marked the first time in recent modern years that representatives of the great rivals have faced each other on the gridiron.

No score was kept and the scrimmage was not even along the lines of a real game, but Coaches Bill Reinhart, of G. W., and Jack Hagerty, of G. U., were thoroughly satisfied with both the conduct of their charges and the progress made in a football way.

Teams Scrimmage Hard.

The boys went at it with a will with the result that several players on both squads received minor injuries, most serious of which were sustained by two G. W. regulars, Bob Nowasky, fullback converted to end this season, and Bob Merka, a halfback. The former suffered a broken nose, the latter a dislocated shoulder. Other hurts were mostly bruises.

The scrimmage was fairly even, with observers giving Georgetown an offensive edge and George Washington a defensive pull. The Hoyas, who have been out for about ten days more than G. W., ran through their plays in midseason form, the blocking especially being excellent for spring.

Actually there were two separate scrimmages, for the A squads and B squads played one another. Georgetown's A squad looked a bit better than the downtowners' A squad but matters were evened when G. W.'s B squad proved superior to their foe.

Practice Welcomed.

The scrimmage was welcomed with unrestrained joy by students of both schools who are anxious for resumption of a football series that was terminated before George Washington was considered a football power.

George Washington's tennis teams wil open their seasons on April 16, it was announced yesterday by the G. W. office. Schedules for both varsity and frosh teams are yet incomplete.

Two of the leading candidates for the varsity squad are Jack Butterworth, basketball center, and Bob Faris, G. W.'s best all-around athlete who also plays football and basketball. Among other candidates are Don Surine, Robert Brasted and Arthur Stoler.

David Strand Johnsen, one of the District's leading junior players, is out for the frosh team which will meet yearlings of Maryland and Georgetown as well as several high school foes.

Sixteen Youngsters to Battle In A.A.U. Ring Finals Tonight

Sixteen of the fightenest youngsters in town pair off tonight at Turner's Arena to decide the eight best amateur mittenmen at their respective weights. The program marks the end of the annual District A. A. U. tournament which, from a competitive viewpoint, has been one of the most successful ever held.

A half dozen consolation bouts, in addition to the eight championship arguments, grace the program and are expected to help lure a capacity audience to the Arena. The first bell will ring at 8 o'clock.

Represented by the best team in its brief history, the Police Boys Club already has tucked away the team challenge trophy, but the contest for individual championships always overshadow the team battle.

Every bout is a potential feature in itself and picking one over the rest as a possible standout would be almost suicidal. At least three lads will bear watching, however, having survived three stormy sessions of leather-pushing to gain the finals. Ovid Crider, Fort Belvoir featherweight; Jack Claggett, National Guard lightweight, and Angelo Pappas, Boys Club of Washington bantamweight, are the three. They are favored to win the title in their respective divisions.

All of them carry knockout punches in their right hands, and are dangerous every minute. That, however, is true of all 16 contenders, and a number of upsets are expected. The complete card:

The pairings:

118-pound class—Angelo Pappas (W. B. C.) vs. Tony DeToto (Police B. C.).

135-pound class—Whitey Francs (Police B. C.) vs. Jack Claggett (Nat'l Guards).

147-pound class—John Williamson (Merrick) vs. Glenn Drake (Police B. C.).

160-pound class—Charlie Malmone (Police B. C.) vs. R. T. Harris (Fort Belvoir).

Consolation bouts—112-pound class, H. E. Collins (W. B. C.) vs. Bernie Perry (Mercury A. C.); 118-pound class, Buddy Yocum (Merrick) vs. Hike Bardassian (W. B. C.); 126-pound class, Al Gray (Merrick) vs. Charlie Arnold (Merrick); 135-pound class, Joe E. Brown (Police B. C.) vs. Carroll Wright (Guards); 147-pound class, John Booher (Fort Myer) vs. Lewis Pavonne (A. B. & W.); 160-pound class, Bill Kemp (Police B. C.) vs. Charlie Cox (Merrick).

FBI Quintet Advances in Post Event

By Jack Munhall.

Shooting as deadly as G-Men you see in the movies, FBI's tossers moved a step nearer their second straight unlimited title in the Post-A. A. U. basketball championships last night trouncing Lubeseal, 47-35, in a quarter-final game before 500 spectators at Tech gym.

Prior to the feature encounter, W. W. Chambers and Columbia Beverage had advanced into the 145-pound finals by convincing victories over Boys Club of Washington Fleetwings and Merrick Boys Club respectively. The scores, also respectively, were 37-32 and 35-20.

FBI, with Joe Robinson, Bethel and Jimmy Thompson forming an awesome scoring machine, had surprisingly little trouble with Lubeseal, whose players apparently were not in condition to meet the rapid pace the G-Men set. Only the stellar performance of Ollie Tipton, a midget among giants, kept the score as close as it was.

Tipton threw in spectacular shots from every conceivable position on the floor. When the last one of his baskets had swished through from midfloor and the scores were tabulated, it was found that the slender, little ace had tallied 17 points, or almost one-half his team's total.

But the marksmanship of one man could not offset the marksmanship of three and Robinson, Bethel and Thompson pumped through an assortment of field goals to keep Lubeseal continually on the defensive. When the FBI regulars were removed late in the second half they held a lead of 39-25 and despite the inefficiency of the second G-Men team, Lubeseal was unable to get started.

Bethel, counting frequently on pivot shots and follows, was the leading scorer for the winners with 12 points. Robinson amassed, 8; Thompson, 9.

A telling factor in Lubeseal's rout was the inability of Cliff Keyser and Bill Noonan, its only tall players, to follow up missed shots or prevent the foe from doing the same. It was under the basket that FBI made most of its points.

Chamber's victory over the Fleetwings was in the best game of the night from the standpoint of good basketball as well as for spectator interest. A late rally led by Temple Jarrell, former Hyattsville High star, and Johnny Williamson, former Tech star, gave the Undertakers the decision.

There will be no games in the tournament until Wednesday.

12 Tourneys Are Slated For District

Ambitious Schedule Is Mapped for Golfers This Season.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Baltimore, March 25.—Golf professionals of Baltimore and Washington, more than 25 in number, met here tonight at the Elkridge Club with the executive committee of the Maryland State Association and promised one-hundred per cent co-operation for the most ambitious links card ever attempted by an organization in this section.

The schedule, including several new events, lists 12 tournaments for the Washington golfers, including a 16-man team match for Sunday, July 31, at Rolling Road, an event that has been planned for several years but never arranged. The team members are to be selected by the golf writers of the respective cities.

The most important of the events assigned to the Washington district was the Maryland Open Championship, set for the Congressional Club, July 26 over the 36-hole route. A pro-amateur at Chevy Chase June 30, a mixed 2-ball at Manor July 13, a one-ball selective drive event at Columbia July 21, and a best ball handicap match at Indian Spring September 14, were also included for the Capital City golfers.

The spring four-ball matches are scheduled to open at Indian Spring, another Washington club getting the second round of play and Columbia the semifinals.

The Capitol Golf and Country Club, formerly the Bannockburn course, was elected to membership in the organization.

Harry Galligher, member of the executive committee, appealed to the pros to double the amount of State association handicap cards to more than 1,000, in order to insure the success of the organization.

The card will open with the Maryland golfers' handicap week starting April 1, with the spring four-ball matches following. Baltimore clubs will get the popular junior events, the Junior at Suburban June 28, and the Junior Open at Baltimore C. C. July 12.

The fall team matches will start September 18, with the teams of 12 divided, six men on the course where the pro will play, to be decided by the flip of a coin, and the other six at the losing club.

In an informal 18-hole medal event in the afternoon for the visiting pros and the executive committee, George Diffenbaugh, of Indian Spring, and Mel Shorey, of East Potomac, tying for the purse with even par 71s, each playing the nines of par 36 and 35. Other scores included Fred McLeod, Columbia, 76; Cliff Spencer, unattached, and Al Jamison, of Kenwood, with 78s, and Tony Sylvester, Capitol, and Jimmy Roach next with 80s.

Hampton Boxers, Wrestlers Lead In Howard Meet

Placing five men in the finals, Hampton College's ring team led the way in the fourth annual C. I. A. boxing and wrestling tournament, which opened yesterday at Howard University. Approximately 1,000 fans saw the preliminary bouts last night.

Hampton and Lincoln placed two men each in the wrestling finals, with Morgan and Virginia State trailing with one each. Chief interest centered around the boxing bouts, which were fast and furiously fought. The tournament will be concluded tonight at Howard, with the first bout scheduled at 7:30 o'clock.

Capital Transit Deficit $7,591 For February

But Operating Result Is 68.8% Better Than a Year Ago.

In its report of February operations filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, the Capital Transit Co. reveals a deficit of $7,591.95 for the month. But compared with a deficit of $24,318.95 for February last year, the result is an improvement of 68.8 per cent.

Operating revenues totaled $848,712.57, an increase of $16,946.37. Operating expenses called for $630,856.37, which was a reduction of $27,138.28. Taxes required $68,887.94, an increase of $13,534.77, or 24 per cent. Depreciation totaled $101,107.73, which was $10,432.68 higher than last year, or 11.5 per cent.

After deduction of all operating expenses, operating income totaled $47,860.53, a gain of $20,117.20. Gross income in February amounted to $50,719.72. At the same time deductions from gross to meet interest on bonds called for $57,311.68, causing the deficit. Revenue passengers numbered 12,307,447, a decrease of 449,208.

The Capital Transit Co. also made a report for the first two months of 1938 as compared wtih 1937. Net income for January and February was in the red $7,425.23 in comparison with a loss of $20,245.22, an improvement so far this year of $12,819.99, or 63 per cent.

New York, March 25 (AP).—Cotton advanced today on a favorable view of extension of the expiration date for making loans on 1937 cotton to July 1, 1938. October advanced from 8.72 to 8.79 and then reacted in sympathy with weakness of stocks to close at 8.72, with final prices 4 to 6 points net higher.

The market opened higher and on foreign and trade buying sold up to net gains of 9 to 12 points during the morning. A belief that growers would prefer either to hold cotton or place it in the loan rather than sell at current prices attracted buying.

Wheat Drops But Corn Rises To Month's Top

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 25.—Jolted by downward plunges of securities, the Chicago wheat market late today suffered a cent a bushel tumble, and ended at the day's bottom prices.

Setbacks of wheat values were in the face of a spirited demand for corn futures, which at one stage rose about a cent to the topmost level in more than a month. Active purchasing by export houses was the principal feature of the corn market, and it was estimated that about 1,000,000 bushels of corn were acquired to be shipped overseas.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅝ to 1 cent under yesterday's finish, May 85⅞-86, July 82½-85⅝. Corn ⅛-⅝ up; May 60⅝-60¾; July, 62¼-62⅝. Oats, ¼ off to an equal advance. Rye unchanged to 1⅛ lower, and provisions unchanged to 7 cents decline.

Stocks Continue Decline With No Sign of Recovery; Trading More Active.

New York, March 25.—Stock prices declined without letup for five hours, at the end of which the Stock Exchange gong mercifully put an end to the cruel spectacle. Prices were weakly established at new low levels all round on a turnover of around 1,680,000 shares the largest of the year. United States bonds were supported but faltered, and dollars hardened. Most commodity markets were weakened by the decline in stocks. May wheat closed ¾ of a cent lower at 86 cents a bushel.

Weakness in stocks was all the more disquieting, because, for today at least, it seemed to be based on general discouragement rather than upon any dramatic development, such as a new war threat, a fresh outburst from a politican, an industrial or railroad bankruptcy, or a Wall Street failure. In spite of the fact that the Senate may pass a tax bill eliminating the disastrous undistributed profits tax, there is still no general realization among the authorities that business is being choked for lack of an adequate flow of capital into its lungs. Sane tax legislation will help, but a sane attitude toward business on the part of the Administration also is needed. If all that comes, in time industry may recover, but it can't remain indefinitely in a state of suspended animation.

Stock prices were only fractionally lower at the start. Selling then dribbled in, combined with a little short operating, and under the persistent if mild pressure prices dropped to new low levels. Steel, Bethlehem, General Electric, American Telephone, Chrysler, Manville, Owens, Sears, Shell, Smelters, Allis Chalmers, Allied Chemical, du Pont, Howe Sound, Link Belt, Union Carbide, Westinghouse and Wright Aeroplane were among the issues to give up 2 to 4 points.

All Groups Lower.

All groups participated in the selling. Steel in falling 3 points pierced its 1936 low for the first time. Manhattan Railway led the traction group downward in falling 3 points, or half its market value, to the lowest price on record. A few preferreds were especially thin, among them being General Cable and United States Leather. Last prices were at the worst.

Contributions to the day's financial score from statistics and opinion were mixed. There is now a disquieting tendency among administration apologists and among former friends of the New Deal to proclaim their bullishness. Such men are not usually concerned with giving the public a tip on business and markets and they are not noted for belaboring the obvious. It is therefore bound to arouse suspicion when, after a long stretch of bearishness, such men say they are bullish.

The most reliable single index of the state of business—the Federal Reserve Board's index of industrial production—was published this morning for February. The index fell from 80 in January to 79 on a seasonally adjusted basis. Only last August the index stood at 117, thus showing the sharpest fall in a comparable period on record. The only good point in the figures are that the decline seems to have been at a slower pace last month. The index fell 4 points from December to January, 4 points from November to December and 14 points from October to November.

Commodity Prices.

Wholesale commodity prices are still weak. The Bureau of Labor Statistics index for the week ended March 19 stood at 79.5 per cent of 1926, a fall of four-tenths of 1 per cent from the previous week. Prices are now 9 per cent under a year ago. It was just a year ago that President Roosevelt brought the big Government guns to bear on commodity prices and he succeeded pretty well in bumping them off. Now, with prices down and business discouraged, it is to be expected hat the prices inflationists in Congress will move to the charge. Led by Senator Patman they are demanding a new bank bill with a "price mandate" for the Federal Reserve banks. The Federal Reserve Board under the bill would be removable for failure to comply with the price mandate, i. e., for failing to jack up prices to the levels desired by Senator Patman. That "objective" seems to be the 1926 level.

Control.

The proposals show that nothing has been and perhaps never can be learned from economic experience by politicians. The same trusting belief in the ability of the Federal Reserve banks through raising or lowering their discount rates or through open market operations to change prices at will is the essence of the bill as was the substance of theories often advanced by college professors, self-styled economists holding public office and others ever since formation of the Federal Reserve System. All that is aside from the main question of whether any particular level for prices is desirable even if obtainable.

Tax Escape.

One of the officers of a local bank spent a morning buying Treasury bills for customers who were escaping taxes similar to that proposed to be levied by New York City on bank deposits. He then bought several thousand dollars of bills for a Detroit man who did not feel like paying Michigan for the privilege of keeping a portion of his assets in liquid form. Should New York City finally decide to levy the tax, spend $500,000 and collect possibly an equal amount, the gyrations of capital in this city will be wonderful to behold. Jersey City banks will have to mushroom their facilities. The situation is not unlike that which was precipitated when it was proposed to levy a tax upon stock brokers doing business here. The stock exchange actually went to the length of leasing a market in New Jersey, to which it prepared to move.

Argentina Grabs Spain's Onion Trade

Buenos Aires, March 24.—The situation in Spain has created an enormously increased market for Argentine onions, exports of which in the first two months of 1938 amounted to approximately 19,870,000 pounds, which compares with only 1,800,000 pounds in the same period of last year.

The principal buyer of Argentina's onions has been England, where 17,000,000 pounds were sold in two months.

Retail Trade Increases Pace In Past Week

Gains 3% to 8% But Lags 10% to 20% Below Year Ago.

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 25.—Easter buying gave a boost to retail trade this week, and at leading centers of distribution sales ran 3 to 8 per cent ahead of last week, though lagging 10 to 20 per cent under a year ago, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Sharp upturns in sales at some centers, particularly in the Midwest, sent retail business rushing up as much as 25 per cent over a week ago.

While retail trade was perking up, special orders brought a small gain over the previous week in wholesale buying, but the rise was not as great as had been hoped for, and wholesale volume ran 12 to 25 per cent under a year ago, it was reported.

"Postponed spring needs were covered in so many departments this week that some retailers recorded the largest sales thus far this year," said the credit agency. "Chiefly responsible for the rise were women's spring dresses, suits, coats, millinery, and shoes; home furnishings and furniture; yard goods, dress accessories, and children's clothing. Pick-up in men's suits was pronounced.

"Demand broadened for electric refrigerators, ranges, washers, and many small kitchen appliances. Hardware, paints, spring cleaning necessities, Easter gift items, jewelry, cameras, and sporting goods contributed to the rising volume.

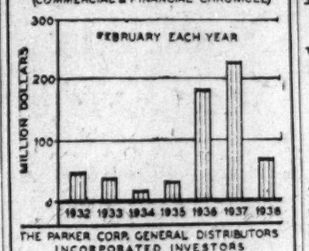
Boston Wool Market.

Boston, March 25 (AP).—(United States Department of Agriculture)—Scattered sales were being closed on domestic wools today in the Boston market. The volume was small to moderate in most transactions and prices were fairly firm. Graded staple combing lengths half-blood territory wools brought 64 to 67 cents, scoured basis. Twelve-month Texas wools in original bag were moved at mostly 63 to 67 cents, scoured basis. Exceptionally good Texas 12-month wools of staple combing length brought prices slightly above this range.

Corporate Financing A Third of Year Ago



Boston, Mass., March 25.—Corporate financing in February was the smallest for any month since February, 1935, and less than one-third the total of a year ago. As in previous months, refunding predominated, accounting for nearly 99 per cent of the total, compared with 70 per cent of the total corporate financing in February of last year.

Selling Wave Topples Curb

New York, March 25 (AP).—Selling on the "big board" spilled over into the curb market today and losses of 1 to 4 or so were fairly common at the finish.

Under heaviest pressure were Aluminum Co. of America at 64, Newmont, 51¼; Northern American Rayon "B," on light volume, at 14, and Pennsylvania Water & Power at 59⅛, the latter off nearly 7 points.

Down fractions to around 3 were American Gas & Electric, American Cynamid "B," International Petroleum, Lake Shore Mines, Carrier Corporation, Hudson Bay Mining, American Meter, United Light & Power "A" and Pantepec.

Bridge

Safeguarding a Trick.

It would appear superfluous, even silly, to point out that a trick is just as valuable if it is won late in the play, instead of early. But, judging from what I have seen at many bridge tables, the average player does not always fully appreciate even the most obvious truths. South's play in the hand shown below was bad, but by no means unusual.

North, dealer.

	♠ A K J 6 ♡ K 5 ◇ J 7 2 ♣ K 8 6 2
♠ 5 4 ♡ 9 7 ◇ Q 9 3 ♣ A Q J 10 4 3	North West East South	♠ Q 10 9 3 2 ♡ 8 6 4 ◇ K 10 8 6 ♣ 7
	♠ 8 7 ♡ A Q J 10 3 2 ◇ A 5 4 ♣ 9 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♡	Pass
2 N T	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's first choice of bids was unwise and put him in the position where he had to make a shaded two notrump rebid. Had he started with one club he would have been able to respond to one heart with one spade. West, despite a good club suit, could not consider the auction at the three-level when vulnerable. Even a nonvulnerable three club bid would have been stretching matters.

West, after considerable thought, selected the club ace as his opening lead, and continued with the club queen. Dummy's king was put up and, when East ruffed, declarer groaned dismally. East returned a low diamond and the declarer eventually found himself down one, losing two diamonds, the club ace and a club ruff.

The error on this hand is of the type found in almost every game. South's play to the second trick was automatic. I grant, freely and without argument, that South should not have expected that the club king would be ruffed away, but, nevertheless, it was certainly a possibility, and the point was that there was utterly no hurry about the cashing of the club king. Declarer should have gracefully conceded West the queen and then, no matter what happened, he would have retained the club king in dummy for an eventual trick on which to discard a losing diamond. If West continued with clubs, dummy would, of course, play low on the third round and declarer would ruff.

Bob Burns Says—

One reason I believe in "preparedness" is because no matter whether you are at a peace conference or a tobacco auction, you can always strike a better bargain if you have somethin' back of you.

It's like my Cousin Lobelia who told me that her sweetheart had proposed to her and she turned him down. I says "Well, do you love him?" And she says "Yes." I says "Well, why did you refuse him?" And she says "I wanted to see what he'd do."

I says "Well he might of rushed away without an explanation!" She says "Oh no, he couldn't've done that—I had the door locked!"

Churches Score Liquor Stand Of Palmisano

Federation Aide Assails Bill Liberalizing Store Restrictions.

Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, was told yesterday by Wilbur La Roe, jr., chairman of the committee on civic affairs of the Washington Federation of Churches, that his "attitude" on liquor legislation is resented by a majority of Washingtonians.

Advising the committee chairman of the churches' opposition to a bill liberalizing the restriction against the licensing of liquor stores, La Roe in a letter to Palmisano said:

"Under the present statute, the Alcohol Beverage Control Board, before granting a license, must satisfy itself as to the wishes of persons residing or owning property in the neighborhood of the premises for which the license is desired. Your proposed amendment provides that the board shall ascertain the wishes of persons residing or owning property within a radius of 600 feet of the place for which a license is desired.

"Quite obviously, the purpose of your amendment is to facilitate the spreading of liquor stores into residential areas in spite of the opposition of property owners and residents. Taking for illustration, a community like Chevy Chase or Takoma Park, there is a very small shopping district which serves people within a radius of a mile or more. All of those people have a legitimate interest in the character of the shopping district. Your bill bars from consideration all people who are not located within 600 feet of the place. Even a church owning property two blocks away from a proposed liquor store would have no voice under your amendment.

"I want you to know that your attitude on this and similar matters is deeply resented by a decided majority of the people residing in our residential areas. We propose to fight your amendment to the limit and we ask that you assign the matter for hearing and give us due notice."

Arlington, D. C. Women Win in Bridge Match

The Edith Swanson Trophy for women's pair championship in the Old Dominion contract bridge tournament was won yesterday afternoon by Mrs. C. Murray Hall, of Washington, and Mrs. P. E. Henninger, of Colonial Village, Arlington, Va. The tournament is being held in the George Mason Hotel in Alexandria. Twenty-seven pairs entered the women's event.

Mrs. Henninger had never played before in a major tournament. Mrs. Hall won her first national master point at the Richmond championships only a month ago. The winners had a score of 193.9 match points and a lead of more than 3 points over Mrs. E. Koether and Mrs. E. Behrend, who were runners-up. The pair in second place are among Baltimore's ranking women players.

Mrs. M. E. Myers and Mrs. Paul Golden placed third; Mrs. James H. Lemon and Mrs. Martin R. West fourth, and Mrs. Lewellyn Lord and Mrs. Allan Rutherford, fifth. The present women champions of the District of Columbia, Mrs. V. A. Clarke and Mrs. H. C. White, finished in sixth place. It was the first time a woman's event has been played in an Old Dominion tournament.

The mixed pair championship was played in the evening session. An innovation in tournament management was given a trial when the 55 pairs who enrolled were divided in two sections. This will produce two champion pairs instead of one. The Stockvis Cup, trophy for the event, will be shared between them. The game last night ran so late that computation of the score was deferred until today.

Office Bill Foes Direct Fire at Welfare Plan

King Seeks to Limit Operations of New Cabinet Agency.

Senate foes of the Government reorganization bill, repulsed time after time in attempts to limit its operation, began a fight yesterday against a proposed welfare department in the President's cabinet.

The new department would include all education, public health and relief agencies.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, said he hoped, even if his motion to reject the proposal were defeated, to gain a concession that educational functions would be limited to those now performed by the office of education.

"I want to make it plain in the bill that Federal control of education can't be extended to the point where it will be taken out of the hands of local authorities," King said.

He declared he also was actuated by concern that if all relief and welfare agencies were grouped under the one head, the impression would be spread that the Federal Government was "taking over the whole relief problem."

"It probably would lead to discouragement of local relief activities," he said.

King's amendment and any others will be considered Monday before the Senate votes at 3 p. m. on a motion by opponents to send the bill back to committee. That would kill it for this session.

If the recommittal motion is delayed, final vote on the bill will come at 5 p. m. Administration leaders confidently predicted passage.

Reorganization Bill Is Attacked By Dr. Walsh

American respect for local sovereignty "will probably not be grossly questioned by frontal attack, but it assuredly can be weakened by erosion," Dr. Edmund A. Walsh, S. J., said last night in Continental Memorial Hall. Dr. Walsh, vice president of Georgetown University and regent of the Georgetown School of Foreign Service, continued:

"The American system conceives Federal authority as the confluence of enumerated streams flowing from the 48 States toward a central reservoir at Washington, but in a limited and defined volume of delegated power. The source is in the mountains, the hills and watersheds of the people, not in a reservoir situated in the District of Columbia. Whatever power the Congress exercises or the Chief Executive wields is a grant, not an original jurisdiction."

Attacks Reorganization.

But an "opposite philosophy of government," he said, is "covertly attempting to substitute for that system one in which power will emanate from the center in the form of concessions. This philosophy, he said, accounts for the current move to abolish the Civil Service Commission "and concentrate the enormous power of appointment in the hands of one person."

"Visualize the consequences," he urged. "Eight hundred and forty-one thousand Federal jobs in the executive branch of the Government virtually at the disposal of a party temporarily in power. . . . Hence the present conflict over the reorganization of Government bureaus and agencies with its concealed objective of increasing the functional and personal influence of the Chief Executive.

Liberty Held Threatened.

"Hence the spectacle of the secretary of the National Committee to Uphold Constitutional Government being ordered to surrender all correspondence and private documents to a Senate committee on the charge of having dared to oppose certain legislative projects which a group of American citizens deemed dangerous to the American system of government. Hence the approaching Congressional investigation of the Tennessee Valley Administration as a consequence of serious charges involving the chairman, and the right of the President to hold a court of inquiry and remove a member of an independent and exempt commission without reference to the Congress. . .

"The sequel could profoundly affect religious liberty, civic freedom, liberty of conscience, of the press and of education. The issue is not one of politics but of national policy."

Department Stores' Sales Off 16 Per Cent

Department store sales in the week ended March 19 were about 16 per cent smaller than in the corresponding week last year, the Federal Reserve Board said today. The board attributed part of the decrease to the fact that Easter occurs three weeks later this year than it did last year.
